Daladier Wins

By John Elliott

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Nov. 30.—Premier Daladier today broke the 24-hour strike proclaimed by the French Confederation of Labor against the Reynaud decree laws, without the shedding of blood and without a serious disturbance anywhere in the country.

Leon Jouhaux, leader of the C. G. T. (Confederation Generale du Travail) suffered the most serious setback in his long career at the head of the French labor movement.

The weapon of the general strike on which he counted so confidently to bringing the French government to its knees, failed even more signally than the general strike tried by the British workers in 1926, for that at least paralyzed public transportation and some important public services for several days.

Under Half Responded

But the French general strike proved a complete fiasco in Paris, and achieved a conspicuous partial success only in the industrial region of northern France, where the coal mines, metallurgical plants and the textile mills were closed.

What must have been the most galling aspect of the collapse of the strike movement to its leaders was that failure was chiefly attributable to the fact that far less than 50 per cent (some estimate is as low as 20 per cent) of the 5,000,000 workers in the confederation responded to the call of their chief.

By the ease and effectiveness with which it put down the general strike, the Daladier government has recovered part of the prestige it lost by its capitulation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler at Munich.

Daladier Hails Victory

"You have proved that democracy, when it wishes, can prevent disorder from showing its ugly head and anarchy from spreading," Daladier declared in a radio speech tonight.

"The whole world knows now that France has just triumphed over her domestic uncertainties and is now stronger than ever. Tomorrow, with her liberties preserved, and her moral unity reconquered, France will continue her effort of restoration.

"The trains have run regularly," he said. "The postal and telegraph

Roosevelt to Talk Strategy Today With Bankhead

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 30 (AP).—President Roosevelt reverted to vacation routine today while he gave preliminary thought to the broad principles of his new Congressional program—expected to be discussed here tomorrow with Speaker Bankhead.

The House leader, coming here from his home in Alabama, was invited for the first of a series of conferences on party strategy and legislative proposals to be pressed in a Congress peopled with increased Republican opposition. Other leaders will be called in when the President returns to Washington Tuesday.

Mother Greets Jungle-Roving Son, 9, Today

Fears Home Too Tame Due on Plane Back From Ecuador

Waiting at Washington Airport early today was a mother torn between the joy of seeing her 9-year-old son on his return from exploration of South American jungles infested with head hunters and the anxiety that perhaps he will find home life too tame.

The lad expected to step off an Eastern Air Lines plane at 4 a. m. was William Henry Dillingham, 3d, much a man of the world. His arrival would end a 1,950-mile flight alone from Ecuador. So far as is known he is the youngest boy to make such a long hop alone.

Tuesday morning his father put the lad on a Pan American clipper at Guayaquil.

Last September he sailed with his father, an amateur explorer and economist of the Social Security Board on leave, Douglas Vincent and Kenneth Miller, all of Washington, for a South American trip.

They headed for Ecuadorean jungles, seldom frequented by white men. The senior Dillingham was in search of material for a travel book he is writing.

Meager news of their wanderings reached Mrs. Dillingham who had to stay home at 1919 Nineteenth street northwest to care for a 3-year-old daughter and 1-year-old son. But she did learn her son had bathed in the waters of an extinct volcano cone and that he had been given a tiger tooth 6 inches long.

Tuesday the senior Dillingham cabled he was sending his son home.

The lad was in the fourth grade of St. Matthew's Parochial School before he left.

Oregon Law Assailed by NLRB Chief

Sees Labor Fettered Calls Courts Partial Board Attacked Capitol Quiz Urged

By William V. Nessly

Amid fresh cries for amendment of the National Labor Relations Act, Edwin S. Smith, member of the National Labor Relations Board, which administers the act, last night struck back in a fighting speech that helped to draw lines for a battle certain to break soon after Congress assembles.

Smith, championing labor's right to organize, declared the regular courts, which "devote a large part of their energies to thinking in terms of property rights," are not "temperamentally inclined" to give labor's problems "sympathetic understanding."

Calls Opposition "Semi-Fascist"

He assailed recently proposed legislation to restrict unions' activities, and denounced employers who have "openly allied themselves with repressive forces of an anti-democratic and semi-Fascist character."

He said legislation adopted in Oregon has put the whole labor movement in the State "in shackles" but voiced doubt that Oregon labor would "patiently suffer a drastic attempt to weaken its economic strength" or accept "continued impotence" as the "necessary payment for past errors."

On the other side of the fight were these developments:

Representative C. Arthur Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, called for amendment of the act to eliminate "labor racketeers," and a Congressional investigation of the board personnel, who he said had handed down "absurd and ridiculous" decisions.

Objectivity Questioned

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, declared the board "has not confined itself to the judicial viewpoint" and "apparently has misconstrued the purpose of the act." He called for a review of the act to consider improvements.

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, declared in Boston that the board's administration of the labor act "has established an all-time record in producing harm instead of good."

Smith spoke in Boston, before the Massachusetts Conference of Social Work, but his speech was made public by the board here.

Declaring the history of the act "has been one of almost continuous

50 Congressmen Off Tonight On Junket to Sugar Plants

By Sidney Olson.

One of the most glittering junkets for Congressmen in the long American tradition of free travel will slide forth from Union Station tonight for an eight-day inspection of the pleasures of Florida.

From 15 to 18 Senators, 35 to 40 Representatives, and what is described as "a host of Government officials" and their wives will be aboard a special train of the Atlantic Coast Line—a train described by promoters of the trip as "the most luxurious railway equipment now in this country."

A close inspection of the itinerary of the trip revealed last night that the tour will give its major attention to points around Lake Okeechobee, where the United States Sugar Corporation maintains mammoth establishments.

Joseph Ferris, managing the trip from this end, denied last night that the junket was organized by the Florida sugar lobbyists who hope at the coming session to bring about lifting of restrictions on Florida sugar—restrictions which Senator Pepper, of that State, described on August 19 of last year in this language:

"With reference to my State, are we forever to be put in a straitjacket and to have no hope of getting out of the class of those discriminated against; or are we to be able to hope that as soon as possible these ironclad restrictions will be removed and we shall have the right to produce sugar according to our natural right?"

Pepper, and many other Floridians, insisted then that Florida should not be made "to suffer" and was as worthy of "fair treatment" as Puerto Rico and Hawaii.

The 16-car special, consisting of a club car, two lounge-cars, and two diners, is made up exclusively of compartments and drawing rooms. No Congressman will be forced to wrestle into his pajamas in an up-

Lest We Forget

The Community Chest closed its campaign last night with a shortage of $250,000 in the amount needed to care for Washington's needy next year.

This dismal fact brings up a picture of hundreds of cases that the 57 institutions depending on the Chest will not be able to care for in 1939.

It also brings up another picture.

On the opening night of the campaign, the dynamic and brilliantly talented Dorothy Thompson stepped before the microphone at Constitution Hall and thrilled a great audience to the marrow with these words:

"I accepted the invitation to speak here tonight, and to open your Community Chest campaign, because this particular campaign is more important than all the rest.

"Washington furnishes most of the front page headlines today. What Washington does is an example and a symbol. So that it devolves upon the people of this district to do more than meet the needs of an average community; they ought to furnish the example for the country, to demonstrate that in the very city where is concentrated the most governmental power, is also concentrated the greatest voluntary effort and the most spontaneous generosity.

"I am afraid that you will have to furnish a yardstick not only of good government but of good and happy community relationships.

"The Community Chest movement this year ought to be an expression of gratitude, for all of us, no matter what our station, have many things to be grateful for. Some of the things that we should be grateful for are things that yesterday we took for granted, believing them inherent in the nature of things, as natural as the air we breathe. It is a new experiment that one wakes up in the morning, and says:

"'I am thankful that I am still free.

"'I am thankful that my Government does not make spies out of my neighbors.

"'I am thankful that my child is not taught in school to report my words at the luncheon table.

"'I am thankful that my little boy is not taught to throw a hand grenade.

"'I am thankful that I cannot be thrown into prison for what I have always thought were my best impulses.

"'I am thankful that no permanent blight is cast over my life by the racial origins of one of my grandparents.

"'I am thankful that my neighbors will judge me for what I am and what I do, and not for something over which I have no control.'

"To keep these things which are very dear to me, I am willing to pay, and I know that one way in which I will keep them is by every expression of human solidarity.

"We shall not keep them if there is rank injustice; we shall not keep them unless there is gratitude for them, expressing itself in social responsibility."

True, every word, and unforgettably phrased.

Can't we all help just a little more to prove that we are glad we live in Washington and in the United States—and that we want others, less fortunate, to be equally thankful?

Delano Orders Shake-up of Examiners

Link to 'Purge' Seen Wright Sent to Coast Transamerica Cited

A shake-up among chief national bank examiners of Federal Reserve districts which may be related to the disciplinary move by the Securities and Exchange Commission against the Giannini-controlled Transamerica Corporation was announced yesterday by Preston Delano, newly appointed Comptroller of the Currency.

William Prentiss, jr., chief national bank examiner for the Twelfth Federal Reserve District, with headquarters in San Francisco, is being transferred, Delano said, to Minneapolis as chief examiner for the Ninth District.

Irwin D. Wright, chief examiner for the Tenth District, with headquarters at Kansas City, Mo., will replace Prentiss as head of the San Francisco office. W. H. Baldridge, chief examiner at Minneapolis, will succeed Wright.

Possibility that the shake-up is a followup of the "purge" some weeks ago in the Comptroller's office is seen in the fact that Prentiss, a close friend of former Comptroller J. F. T. O'Connor, was sent to San Francisco as chief examiner only last January.

Prentiss, a Los Angeles attorney, served under O'Connor as first deputy comptroller for more than two years. He resigned to become chief examiner at San Francisco. O'Connor resigned a few weeks later to run for Governor of California and

U. S. to Borrow Billion and Half December 15

700 Million to Spend Balance for Refunding Makes Debt 39 Billions

By the Associated Press.

The Treasury decided yesterday on a $1,641,613,750 financing operation for December 15.

Secretary Morgenthau announced that $700,000,000 would be sought to pay for part of the spending program and $941,613,750 would be borrowed to repay the same amount of 1½ per cent notes maturing next March 15.

It was the largest financing order of the Treasury in two and a half years.

Not counting refunding issues, the new financing will bring to $1,500,000,000 the total money borrowed in this fiscal year to pay for operating expenses of the Government. At least $600,000,000 more will be needed before the close of the year next June 30.

When the last Congress expanded relief, public works and national defense expenditures, it authorized a program expected to cause a $4,000,000,000 deficit in this fiscal year. The shortage, Secretary Morgenthau has indicated, would be made up by selling securities, by spending desterilized gold, and by borrowing from social security and other Government trust funds.

The financing will increase the Federal debt, already at a record high. The Treasury's direct obligations now total $38,590,577,625. They will rise to about $39,300,000,000 after December 15 and are expected to pass $40,000,000,000 by the end of the fiscal year.

Police Hero Dies, Companion Kills Convict in Duel

Chicago, Nov. 30 (AP).—A gun battle, fought in a West Side tavern while the proprietor and four patrons sprawled on the floor, ended today in the deaths of a detective hero and an escaped convict.

The victims were Sergt. Edward Lynn, twice cited for bravery for killing robbers in pistol duels, and James Wood, 33, a fugitive from Missouri.

Lynn and Sergt. Allen Mulvey were called into the place after Tom Williams, the owner, learned Wood was carrying a revolver. Wood was dozing at the bar. Lynn sought to arouse him. Wood whisked his weapon from an underarm holster and fired. Lynn fell, a bullet through his head. Mulvey killed Wood.

Jury Convicts 3d Nazi Spy, Asks Mercy

Glaser Won't Appeal Voss and Girl Guilty Both Face 20 Years 4th Admitted Crime

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 30.—German-born Erich Glaser, 28, a former United States Army Air Corps private, was convicted late today—with a recommendation for clemency—of conspiracy to steal American military secrets. The same Federal court jury convicted two other German spies last night without recommendation.

Those facing the possible maximum of 20 years in prison under the United States code concerning espionage are Johanna Hofmann, 26, former hairdresser on the German liner Europa, and Otto Hermann Voss, 39, former airplane mechanic.

Judge Praises Prosecution

After Glaser's belated conviction, the judge praised the Government's prosecution staff for having had "the courage to divulge what it had learned."

He said the trial "should teach persons coming here that they must understand that to engage in espionage is dangerous work and that such persons shall be punished."

Judge Knox also praised the jury, which convicted Fraulein Hofmann and Voss after only 4 hours 25 minutes of deliberation on seven weeks of testimony and resumed Glaser's case this morning.

Given "Out of Friendship"

Glaser was accused of supplying the Army's "Z Signal" code for airplanes approaching a landing field to Guenther Gustav Rumrich, U. S. Army deserter, who pleaded guilty, testified for the Government and now also awaits sentence.

Counsel for Glaser contended he was unaware Rumrich was associated with Nazi agents and that the information was given "out of friendship."

Attorneys for both Fraulein Hofmann and Glaser said they had no funds for appeal, but the former's counsel, George C. Dix, said: "If Hitler would send us the money, certainly we would appeal."

"U. S. Is Open Field"

U. S. Attorney Lamar Hardy, one of several who made investigations of the spy ring abroad, said in a statement:

"We have no counter-espionage in this country and as long as that is so the United States is an open field for the work of foreign spies. . . ."

Airplane Worker Accused of Taking Photos for Japan

Los Angeles, Nov. 30 (AP).—Karl Allen Drummond, 21, was arrested tonight on a Federal indictment accusing him of attempting to sell to Japan, for $2,000, photographs of Army and Navy airplanes in various stages of construction and documents dealing with the construction of aircraft, embodying closely guarded secrets of design.

2 Youths Kidnap D. C. Schoolgirl; Sister Escapes

Capital Student Kidnap Victim

MARY BROWN

Pull Her Into Truck Near Oxon Hill Home 2 Suspects Seized One Partly Identified

Dragged screaming into a truck by two youths on a lonely road near her home yesterday, an 18-year-old convent school student was being sought through the night by police and armed neighbors who blocked roads and beat dense woods in the vicinity of Oxon Hill, Md.

The girl's sister, 15, escaped the kidnapers by plunging into underbrush fringing the road, crawling through a fence and fleeing across a snowy field.

Mary Brown, student at Notre Dame Academy business school, in Washington, was seized by one of the roughly dressed young men after she and her sister, Lucy, refused a ride with them. She was thrown into the rear of the light black-bodied delivery van, which then rushed toward Washington, one door swinging open.

Neighbors Form Posse

Lucy dashed into her home, set several hundred yards back from lonely Box road, screaming for help and found no one there. She caught up the telephone and sobbed a hysterical story to Prince Georges Police Sergt. Elon Turner, of Marlboro substation.

Lucy dashed into her home, set several hundred yards back from lonely Box road, screaming for help. Her mother caught up the telephone and notified Prince Georges Police Sergt. Elon Turner, after Lucy sobbed out a hysterical story.

Police swung into action at once; the siren atop the Oxon Hill firehouse called volunteer firemen to the scene; Maryland State Police were called in. A score of neighbors formed a posse.

2 Youths Seized

William B. Brown, the girl's father, called from his work at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, rushed home and called on the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Two young men, riding in a truck resembling that in which Mary was kidnaped yesterday, were seized in Washington last night.

The girl was not with them.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said soon after their arrest they admitted being in the vicinity of the kidnaping, but denied even seeing the girl.

One of the youths was partially identified at Third Precinct station here last night by Lucy. She was unable to identify the other, beside the girls.

Sister Finds Clew

In Maryland, meanwhile, police pursued a clew that a woman on Suitland road, near Reds Corner, 5 miles from the Brown home, heard a girl screaming in a truck which passed about 5 p. m. on the way toward Clinton. This clew was unearthed by Margaret Brown, 20, the eldest sister, who made an investigation of her own.

After midnight, Mrs. Brown broadcast an appeal to the kidnapers from Station WOL not to harm her daughter and to release her, should they be listening in. She preceded her appeal with a 10-minute description of the kidnaping.

Mary, a pretty brunette, and Lucy left their school at 3:10 p. m., Lucy said, and rode by streetcar and bus to Bungalow Hollow, a small settlement on Box road about 3 miles from home. There they were given a ride by Carl Seitz, an Oxon Hill merchant, to Oxon Hill.

Leaving his automobile there, they began walking home along the

Acquittal Plea Lost, Warrings' Case Near Jury

Government Rests Sadur Leaves Stand Deliberation Due Today

Justice Laws refused a second time late yesterday to order the Warring gang and their tax expert acquitted of conspiring to defraud the Government of its share of the profits on the $2,000,000 a year numbers racket.

The 11 men and one woman of the jury are due to start deliberations late today.

Pine Closes Case

District Attorney Pine presented late yesterday the last detail of the Government story of how the Warrings rose from trifling bootleggers to gamblers in millions, who paid off scores of underworld retainers, bribed policemen with thousands of dollars a year and maintained a fleet of automobiles.

Not a word in their own defense was offered by the three smoothly tailored numbers operators. Emmitt, 33-year-old "brains of the gang," listened intently as Sadur fought his verbal duel with the prosecutors. Leo Paul, 35, and Rags, 30, the gang's trigger man, appeared bored.

Sadur Can't Remember

Disappointed by the silence of the brothers were agents of the Metropolitan police and Corporation Counsel Seal, who have sat in court for days waiting to hear the Warrings asked who got the bribes. Both agencies started investigations

Wife-Slayer Dies in Chair

Post Begins Christmas Fund For D. C.'s Neediest Families

The Washington Post Christmas Fund once again this year will be devoted to assistance for the District's neediest families.

Selected by the D. C. Council of Social Agencies, these families will all come from the ranks of "unemployed employables."

They are decent and willing—but destitute and without jobs.

They have mouths to feed and children to clothe—but no work.

They are families that will receive no assistance from the D. C. Welfare Department, the PWA, or any source.

They are not chronic charity cases, always seeking help.

But they are honest American families, deserving, willing to work, temporarily down on their luck and in need of a helping hand.

Fifty such families were helped last year by The Post's 1937 Neediest Families Fund, a sum slightly in excess of $5,000 which came from hundreds in amounts from 3 cents to $100.

It is hoped that this year's fund will help 50 more families.

The stories of these neediest families of the richest city in the country will be presented in The Post, between now and Christmas Day, beginning tomorrow.

They will be the stories of families carefully checked, the plight of each family personally investigated by experts of the Council of Social Agencies. They will be families who would like toys and dolls and baskets for Christmas—but who need money for rent and groceries and coal.

Read these stories. Then decide your own Christmas would be happier if you could join hundreds of others who will give to help others less fortunate.

Contributions may be mailed to The Washington Post's Neediest Families Fund, or left in the Neediest Families Fund Box at the counter on the first floor of The Washington Post Building.

Lewis Assails Profit-Sharing As a 'Delusion'

Against 'Paternalism' 'Can't Live on Hopes' Leaves Labor Insecure

By Robert C. Albright.

John L. Lewis, beetle-browed chairman of the C. I. O., yesterday opposed profit sharing in industry as a form of largesse undesired by the worker who "does not want to be the recipient of this paternalistic generosity."

Lewis told a special Senate committee exploring incentive tax methods of promoting profit sharing that labor "cannot eat or live on hopes of participation in profit-sharing plans." He charged use of such plans in the past as substitute for collective bargaining.

"I think that in profit sharing there is too much of the theory of distribution of largesse—like dropping a dollar in the plate or $20 in the pot—as an act of generosity," the C. I. O. leader testified.

"Delusion and Snare."

"I know that from time to time well-meaning men in industry have voluntarily wanted to give workers some participation in their profits, but I don't think that out of those experiments has there come any crystallized philosophy or basic principles that could be applied today. Frankly, I think the profit-sharing idea is rather a delusion and a snare in modern industry."

Lewis' flat stand against the Senate committee's profit-spreading objectives followed similar opposition last week from his bitter labor rival, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

But Green did not oppose the theory of profit-sharing, provided labor is permitted to bargain collectively in setting up such systems. Lewis struck at the principle itself and declared workers prefer to be paid each week on a fair wage basis.

No Logical Plan Now

A series of business witnesses testifying before Lewis took the stand differed on the wisdom of tax rewards for companies practicing profit sharing, and an outstanding economist and sociologist, Mgr. John A. Ryan, of Catholic University, said he knew of fewer than 200 profit-sharing plans in this country and 1,000 in the world.

Mgr. Ryan said that to be logical and scientific, a profit sharing plan would distribute only surplus profits proportionately to all classes of workers within a company. Distributions would be made, he said, after fair wages had been paid and capital had been earned sufficient to encourage continuance in business. He said no such plan is now in effect.

Today the committee will hear Lammond du Pont, president of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., said to have some 14 worker benefit plans distributing more than $20,000,000 annually.

Other witnesses today will include Frank Gannett, publisher of Gannett Newspapers; John D. Moore, commissioner on the New York State Labor Board; Prof. Willford I. King, of New York University, and A. L. Marsh, president of the Hoskins Manufacturing Co., Detroit.

Plan Lacks Security

Lewis contended that there is no security for workers in any plans evolved by management because labor is not given a voice in management.

The labor leader was frequently questioned by committeemen, but treatment was friendly and no clash developed.

Chairman Herring (Democrat), of Iowa, asked if Lewis believed "the Government is the only one in a position to provide security for the workers."

"I don't see how anyone else can do it," Lewis said.

He said he knew of no profit-sharing plans that have been adopted since collective bargaining was written into law. If employes really desire to share profits, he declared they would have no difficulty reaching an agreement with workers. Incentive taxation to encourage such plans, he said, might upset the competitive relationship between industries.

"Labor's disillusioned experience with regard to profit-sharing plans have been that they have been used as a device to avoid the payment of an immediate decent wage and have made labor dependent upon haphazard industrial and financial policies of management," Lewis said. "Immediate higher standards of living achieved through collective bargaining with labor unions is the best guarantee policy for the continued expansion of industrial activity and profits for management."

2 Magnates Indorse

F. J. Moss, president of the American Sash & Door Co., who defended business against what he called a campaign of "false propaganda," and R. O. Kennedy, vice president of the Cluett-Peabody Co. of Troy, N. Y., both indorsed the principle of incentive taxation to encourage profit-sharing plans. Kennedy opposed participation by executives drawing salaries in excess of $10,000. Walter Goodspeed, of the American Box Board Co., said he opposed incentive taxation if it meant that companies which did not share profits had to carry the tax load of those companies that did.

WPA's Rolls Drop 27,984 In 2d Week

Most in Pennsylvania 'Painless' Cut Is Goal Increase in Maryland

Works Progress Administration officials announced last night that relief rolls declined 27,984 persons to a total of 3,215,564 during the week ended November 26, marking the second consecutive weekly decrease.

The WPA is attempting a "painless" pruning of rolls to stretch the current $1,500,000,000 relief fund to March 1, when President Roosevelt estimates an additional $500,000,000 will be necessary to continue the program until next June 30.

The WPA is attempting to gear reductions to areas where industrial pick-up is most pronounced, and by not filling quotas as vacancies occur.

Last night's report showed the biggest reduction was reported from Pennsylvania, where the total decreased 3,698, to 286,602 during the week. Increases were reported in Washington, South Dakota, Tennessee, Oregon, Nebraska, Nevada, Mississippi, Maryland, Idaho, Maine, Delaware and Arkansas.

At the same time the Public Works Administration, pointing to a 34.5 rise since June in the index of steel output, said its program was accomplishing its intended purpose of stimulating basic heavy industries.

Howard A. Gray, assistant administrator, said PWA was not claiming entire credit for revival of the steel industry, but added:

"The manner in which the step-up in production coincided with the release of millions of dollars' worth of PWA construction contracts and orders for material indicated that the program was at least in part responsible."

Between June 28 and November 15, Gray said, the approximate value of construction authorized by PWA rose from $450,000,000 to $1,477,995,426, and steel mills increased their ingot production from 28 to 62.5 per cent of capacity.

Gray said cement shipments increased from 10,943,000 to 12,357,000 barrels between June and October.

Friction Found To Fall as Skid Speed Goes Up

Road Researchers Meet Surface Tests Reported Tire May Lubricate Slide

Highway research experts, striving to put the skids under automobile skidding on the Nation's highways, yesterday encountered rough going in efforts to reduce the skid to a coefficient as the highway research board of the National Research Council went into its eighteenth annual session.

Experiments with antiskid road surfaces were outlined showing there is a slight drop in the coefficient of friction with increasing speed of sliding.

Benjamin Janer, of New York City, said test results obtained fail to confirm the assertion that coal tar is preferable to asphalt in bituminous macadams or bituminous concrete from the point of view of skid resistance.

He said that in the tests rubber with a cut tread obtained "only slightly better" results that those obtained with smooth rubber, and that added resistance offered to skidding by treads is obtained through mechanical effects rather than friction. It was pointed out that the experiments were limited to low speeds and automobiles "act up" in unpredictable ways at higher speeds.

Dudley Babcock, of the U. S. Bureau of Public Roads, introduced the problem of the auto tire "lubricating" skidding paths.

GAO Agent Tells Inquiry TVA Is Honest

Only 'Minor Shortages' 3 Investigators Report Land Purchase Cited

By the Associated Press.

A representative of the General Accounting Office told Congressional investigators yesterday that so far as he knew there had been "no dishonesty worth investigating" in TVA's vast expenditures.

Stuart B. Tulloss, chief investigator of the accounting office, testified there had been "minor shortages," most of which had been made up, but that he knew of no criminal intent to defraud.

His statement, made before the Joint Senate-House Committee investigating TVA, was concurred in by William A. Owen and Francis T. Matchett, assistant investigators.

The three men had testified at length concerning differences between their office and the TVA when Representative Thomason (Democrat), of Texas, inquired:

"In the five years that you have been going over TVA records have you found any shortage, defalcation or evidence of dishonesty on the part of any employe of TVA with criminal intent?"

After Tulloss had replied in the negative, Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, called attention to a report the investigating committee has made to the Department of Justice, based on General Accounting Office records, regarding TVA's purchase of Tennessee phosphate lands. Wolverton said TVA paid $625,000 to the American Agricultural Corporation for lands which the corporation had purchased for $145,000.

Asked whether he stood on his answer in the face of Wolverton's remark, Tullos replied that when his organization charged fraud it must have evidence sufficient to convict.

The Political Arena

Green Holds Choice of Hastings Reactionary Farley Calls President 'Popular as Ever'

Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, asserted last night that when the Republican National Committee on Tuesday elevated former Senator Daniel C. Hastings, of Delaware, to its executive committee, it showed that "discredited social and economic views" still prevailed in the party. He said Hastings was "so reactionary that even Mr. Hoover's mild concessions to the spirit of the times seem liberal by comparison."

SEN. McNARY

However, Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary, of Oregon, retorted that Republicans in Congress would make their own policies, and Representative Joseph W. Martin (Republican), of Massachusetts, said members of the party in Congress "will pursue a forward-looking program."

Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, said yesterday he would not be surprised if his seat were contested after Congress convened in January.

The Senator won re-election by a slim margin over Raymond Willis, Republican. Willis has sought a recount.

Sumter, S. C., Nov. 30 (AP).—South Carolina has a new Republican Party. It is "independent and has no affiliation with what now is known as the Union Republican Party, headed by Joseph W. (Tieless Joe) Tolbert of ninety-six."

J. Bates Gerald, of Summerton, was named chairman of the new group yesterday. Mrs. Cornelia Dabney Tucker, State publicity chairman, said the group feels "the Solid South is a thing of the past," because of "policies of the present Administration."

Chicago, Nov. 30 (AP).—James A. Farley said today President Roosevelt "is just as popular as he ever was."

The Democratic national chairman at the end of a two-day conference with Western leaders, said:

"If the Democratic Party takes steps to cure the conditions which caused them to lose several seats in the recent election there is no question about the outcome in 1940."

He blamed "local conditions" for the losses the party suffered on November 8.

Gloucestermen Say 8-Hour Day'll Kill Fisheries

Gloucester, Mass., Nov. 30 (AP).—Gloucester fishermen, short on "book learning" but graduates of the school of experience, prepared tonight to fight enforcement of a treaty which they contend will end their sailing dayes and cripple New England's fishing industry.

The International Labor Treaty calls for licensed captains, mates, engineers and assistant engineers and eight-hour working days on all vessels operating outside inland waterways.

This means a minimum of 12 licensed men would be required aboard each vessel, more than many carry as an entire crew. Comparatively few fishing captains and engineers have papers of any kind.

WPA Teaching For Cripples Is Already a Hit

Pupils, Parents Approve 'We Like It Swell' Mainly Organizing

Although it is hardly under way, the new WPA project for instruction of physically handicapped children is already a hit with pupils, parents and interested observers, a brief checkup revealed yesterday.

"We like it swell," chorused Gerald Hoffman and Walter Riggin, each 11, patients in Children's Hospital.

The former was a fifth-grader when he was admitted to Children's two months ago with a baffling leg ailment. In all probability he will remain a patient for some time longer, said his nurse.

Heretofore there were no accredited teachers who went into homes and hospitals to tutor children kept out of school because of illness or accident.

Organizing Going On

The Riggin lad, also a fifth-grader, came in to have his appendix removed and will be a patient only three weeks or so—but there are others who have been hospitalized longer than Gerald without receiving a single lesson in the three r's.

The last several weeks have been devoted to organizing hospital classes, investigating home cases and making teacher assignments. In addition, the 16 teachers have been receiving intensive training in the coaching of such a specialized variety of pupil—the congenital cripple, the accident victim, the chronic heart sufferer, the infantile paralysis victim, and so on.

"I hope Charles won't have to wait much longer," said Mrs. Dorothy Brice, of 2128 O street northwest.

Her son, Charles, 9, was stricken with infantile paralysis four years ago. A courageous lad, physically perfect but for his weakened legs, his home is not on the route of the bus which takes boys and girls daily to and from the Langdon School for crippled children!

Cripple Apt Pupil

When he reached school age, his mother drove him to Calvert School but his attendance was irregular, being dependent to a great extent on good weather.

"Then, too," explained Mrs. Brice, "Charles has become too heavy for me to carry up and down the front steps. It will be grand to have a teacher come here regularly."

Mrs. Mary E. Lewis, one of the WPA instructors, called on Charles yesterday and found him to be an apt pupil. She may be assigned to him for the duration of the special project, which is to continue until June 30, 1939.

Mrs. Beulah Jones Drake, principal teacher of crippled children at Langdon School, praised the selections which were made for the eight white and eight colored teaching posts. The white group, headed by Supervisor Elizabeth Goodman, visited the school this week to study methods and procedure.

Now More White Children

Miss Ida Kent is supervisor of the colored teachers. The entire project is under the general direction of Mrs. Hazel C. Taylor, assistant director of educational and recreational work for the District WPA.

Preliminary data indicated that the number of colored children to be accommodated exceeded the white. However, continued investigations revealed records of 135 white and 98 colored eligibles, according to Mrs. Goodman.

Boy Jailed for Life In Attack-Murder

Pryor, Okla., Nov. 30 (AP).—Wirt Parr, 17-year-old farm youth, was sentenced to life imprisonment today for clubbing to death Alma Manning, 19, high school honor student. He pleaded guilty.

Marshal O. B. Hall quoted the youth as saying he stopped Miss Manning in a lane last August, became enraged when she repulsed him, knocked her down with a 3-foot club and cremated the body on a brush pile.

Federal Workers Lost in Maze Of D. C. Tax Power Dispute

Question May Go to Supreme Court Capital's Rights as 'State' Involved An Issue in Business Levy Suits

By James D. Secrest.

District employes yesterday appeared to be victims of a Congressional joke as the District Tax Advisory Committee began to reconnoiter after its rout this week before Washington taxpayers.

While the average layman was hopelessly befuddled by the legal citations of lawyers who argued pro and con on the constitutionality of a District income tax, employes of the District government began to wonder if they have been paying the Federal Government taxes unnecessarily.

Issue in Court Case

The constitutional argument, which may be clarified by a business privilege tax case now pending in the U. S. Court of Appeals, centers around the question of whether the District of Columbia is in some particulars a State and whether Congress is its State Legislature.

The issue probably will never be settled until it is decided by the U. S. Supreme Court, and this may not be possible unless Congress sees fit to enact an all-embracing District income tax. However, the advisory committee will keep an eye on the developments in two business privilege tax cases on the chance that they may throw light on the question.

What confuses District employes is the argument that the District is a State in the sense that it can't tax the salaries of Federal employes. State employes, they know, are exempt from the Federal income levy, but District employes are not.

If the Federal Government can tax District salaries, they wonder, why can't the District government tax Federal salaries?

A lay witness at the Capitol Hill hearings suggested that the District Commissioners ask the President to request an opinion from the Attorney General. Chairman Daniel J. Donovan expressed doubt, however, that the city heads could make such a request.

Up to Committee

If an opinion is desirable, he said, it should be requested by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, which will make a report to Congress in January on the District tax problem.

Colin F. Stam, counsel of the committee, several years ago said in a letter to another congressional committee that there was grave doubt as to the constitutional authority of Congress to impose a local income tax on Federal employes.

Since then the question has been raised frequently in argument against a District income tax. Yet until the hearing this week no one even suggested that there may be some question as to the right of the Federal Government to tax the salaries of District employes.

The House District Committee was willing to put the issue to a test and twice during the Seventy-fifth Congress reported an income tax proposal only to have the House flatly reject it.

Since then the question has been raised again with regard to the business privilege tax because interstate commerce is affected. Justice Jennings Bailey last summer in U. S. District Court delivered an opinion that Congress when legislating for the District has the same status as a State Legislature.

On the other hand, the Municipal Court and the Board of Tax Appeals have taken contrary views in upholding the constitutionality of the business privilege tax.

And the layman has been submerged in a maze of legal arguments and precedents.

Boettiger's Paper Is Overruled

The National Labor Relations Board ruled yesterday that newspaper motor route carriers and outside telephone subscription solicitors are employes of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, recently the scene of a prolonged strike.

In its first definition of the word "employe" as used in the Wagner labor relations act, the Board said that the term means "all employes in the conventional as well as legal sense except those by express provisions excluded."

Post-Intelligencer officials had contended that motor route carriers were independent contractors as dealers under individual contract with the company. They also maintained that outside telephone subscription crew workers were employed by George Turner, who had an individual contract with the paper, and that therefore his employes were not Post-Intelligencer workers.

The newspaper is owned by William Randolph Hearst and published by John Boettiger, president Roosevelt's son-in-law.

U. S. Subpena Of A.M.A. Data Ruled Valid

'Papers Well Identified' In Antitrust Hearing Doctors Lose 2 Points

The Government was upheld by Justice James M. Proctor in District Court yesterday in its efforts to obtain extensive records of the American Medical Association for presentation to the extraordinary grand jury investigating alleged monopolistic practices of the A. M. A.

Meanwhile, the grand jury heard two Government witnesses from California, Dr. H. Clifford Loos, of the Ross-Loos Medical Group, Los Angeles, and Dr. George R. Stevenson, of the San Diego Beneficial Society.

Justice Proctor refused to quash a subpena requiring the A. M. A. to produce data concerning the association's opposition to group medical practice which has passed through the hands of top A. M. A. officials in the last three years.

Two weeks ago the court had quashed two-thirds of another Government subpena seeking A. M. A. records. Seth Richardson, A. M. A. attorney, held that the second subpena was virtually as sweeping as the first one.

In yesterday's opinion, however, Justice Proctor said: "I see no reason why the association cannot comply with the subpena without undue difficulty or hardship if its papers have been kept under any efficient system of filing." He asserted that "the desired papers are well identified."

Justice Proctor also disagreed with the A. M. A. contention that the court should now determine whether it has jurisdiction over the matters under investigation.

"There are as yet no defendants," said Justice Proctor. "There may never be any. Hence at this stage of the proceedings, the association has no such status as entitles it to raise any of the vital questions now urged upon the court."

The bills are of "fairly good workmanship," Black said, but the counterfeiter forgot to engrave a license plate on an automobile appearing in a picture of the Treasury.

Acquittal Plea Lost, Warrings' Case Near Jury

Warring

of the Washington vice and gambling rackets after the protection setup was revealed by the prosecution testimony.

The Government claims Sadur helped the gang hide its profits by revising his schedules and making other changes to deceive the Internal Revenue agents. Assistant District Attorney Wilson pressed Sadur hard when he took the stand yesterday. Waving sheets of figures Sadur had said were written at a certain time, Wilson kept asking for details until Sadur declared he did not remember when they were written.

Wilson led Sadur to his testimony that the gang's huge turnover—$1,365,000 in 1935 after runners and the like took 30 per cent of the gross—was no proof that their operations were profitable.

Defense Objects

"I've seen concerns take in $10,000,000 and show a loss at the end of the year," said Sadur.

"Were they doing an illegal business?" Pine thrust swiftly.

To his feet jumped former District Attorney Rover, counsel for Sadur. "I object," he snapped. "That is a highly prejudicial question."

Justice Laws ruled that the inquiry was proper.

Even though they had to pay off $42,000 losses on two days when bettors plunged on lucky numbers, the Warrings still had cash on hand, Sadur admitted.

Sadur repeated his belief that bribes were a legal "business expense" for an illicit business and could be deducted from the receipts for income-tax purposes.

"And you would regard corruption of a public official as a legitimate business expense?" Pine asked him.

Rover thundered an objection. Justice Laws overruled him after Pine protested: "The man says he is a tax expert. I want to test this expert."

Joseph P. O'Connell, special assistant to the Attorney General, was called in rebuttal by the Government. O'Connell denied vigorously what Sadur had testified about being offered freedom from prosecution if he would testify against the Warrings.

Laws Invites Prayers

When the Government announced its case closed, Justice Laws invited the lawyers to submit their prayers for instructions to be given the jury by the court.

Whelan then renewed his motion that the jury be ordered to acquit his clients. There was no evidence, he said, that Leo Paul and Rags Warring knew what went on in the numbers racket. They left everything to their brother, Emmitt. And Emmitt, Whelan claimed, did all he could to help the Treasury agents, offering more than once to pay the tax if they would tell him how much.

(The Government denies this cooperation, saying Emmitt conspired to falsify the figures on which he asked the agents to compute the tax.)

Rover urged that Sadur be turned loose because if any conspiracy was proved it was three conspiracies, one for each year of the Warrings' income taxes involved.

Justice Laws denied these appeals and ordered today's all day battle of oratory and legal citations to start at 9:30.

was defeated in the Democratic primaries.

Wright in Office 20 Years

Wright, who will assume immediate charge of examination of national banks in California and other Pacific Coast States, has been chief examiner at Kansas City since 1930. He has had 20 years of service in the comptroller's office.

Baldridge, who will succeed Wright at Kansas City, has been chief examiner at Minneapolis since 1932. Although chief examiners are frequently shifted from one office to another, transfer of a chief examiner who has served as head of a particular office for only about 11 months is regarded as unusual. Treasury officials refused to comment on the shake-up, describing it as merely "routine."

Prentiss Shifted Long Way

Further significance is seen in the fact that Prentiss, a Californian, is being transferred to a distant State. When Prentiss left Washington to assume the position as chief examiner at Los Angeles, it is recalled, one explanation was that he wished to return to his native State.

Wright, it was learned, was here Tuesday in conference with his superiors in the comptroller's office. Presumably, instructions were given him concerning the work of examining national banks in the Twelfth District.

As chief examiner in the Twelfth District, Wright will have supervision over the Bank of America at San Francisco and other banks controlled by Transamerica Corporation.

Work Is Secret

Although Treasury officials have declined to comment, indications have been that no action by the Treasury with regard to the vast Giannini banking empire is to be expected, at least in the immediate future.

The work of the comptroller's office in supervising bank activities is carried on secretly, except in rare cases, officials explained.

When Prentiss went to San Francisco as chief examiner, it is recalled, there were reports that he would undertake certain special banking problems. Presumably, he supervised the preparation of some of the data which the Treasury is believed to have supplied the SEC for use in the Transamerica Corporation hearing, which will begin January 16. The SEC has directed the bank holding company to show cause why its stock should not be stricken from the list of registered securities salable on stock exchanges.

The schedule calls for departure tonight at 10:30 o'clock, with cars available for occupancy at 9 p. m. Sandwiches, tea and coffee will be served from the diner until midnight, it was said.

Running express, the train will reach Jacksonville at 3:15 p. m. tomorrow, where there will be sightseeing and dinner at the chamber of commerce, under the specific pledge of "no speaking, plenty of entertainment."

Arriving at Miami the next morning, the junketers will go sightseeing, play golf, swim "and etc.," with details of the jamboree to be announced on the spot. Sunday evening the party will leave Miami for a heavy two-day schedule, in which the entire sugar-raising, processing and experimental plants of the United States Sugar Corporation will be viewed at Canal Point, Belle Glade and Clewiston.

AAA's Beneficiary

The great sugar company employs about 3,000 laborers on more than 100,000 acres of everglades muck on the southern shore of Lake Okeechobee, where two factories are maintained at Canal Point and Clewiston.

This is the corporation which received $1,067,665 in three checks from the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in 1933 and 1934 for not growing sugar cane. These were the highest benefit payments of all.

The United States Sugar Corporation has an interlocking directorate with the Celotex Co. of Chicago and Louisiana, which also controls large sugar-cane properties in Louisiana and Florida. The second company uses great quantities of bagasse, sugar cane waste, from which building materials are made.

Clarence Bitting, of Watch Hill, R. I., millionaire president of United States Sugar, is chairman of the finance committee of Celotex, which went into receivership in 1932. He is an ardent booster of Florida.

After the slower-paced trip through this area, the train will speed to Tampa for further gayeties and will then turn back to Washington, arriving here the morning of December 8. Tallahassee, State capital, will not be visited on the tour.

The complete list of those ready to embark for the sunny southland was unavailable last night.

Gungirl, 17, and Husband Elude Manhunt in Midwest

Pair Robbed Banks Kidnaped 3 Men Reported in Missouri

By the Associated Press.

Excelsior Springs, Mo., Nov. 30.—A young couple wanted on charges of kidnaping, bank robbery and auto theft, tonight were the subject of a growing manhunt in the Middle West.

Blonde Estelle Dickson, 17, and her husband, Benny, 27, believed to be the same couple who robbed two South Dakota banks and escaped a police trap in Michigan Monday, got away from 40 officers in this southern Missouri resort town after they were reported seen on the streets early today.

When a police ambuscade was foiled shortly after Sunday midnight near the Michigan-Indiana State line, a police car was disabled by gunfire and the man and woman whom the authorities meant to trap both suffered head wounds. There followed a wild flight during which three men were kidnaped and two automobiles stolen.

A six-hour search here revealed no trace of the couple or their light car, bearing Illinois plates.

Chief of Police William A. Payne said the couple were identified by Mott Kennell, an employe of a health resort, who noticed their car parked at the curb with the woman behind the wheel and the man slumped over in the front seat as if doubled up with pain.

Last Thursday Dickson escaped from officers at a Topeka, Kans., tourist camp when officers fired 48 shots at him.

Col. Holland Smith To Head Marine Selection Board

The Navy Department announced yesterday that Col. Holland M. Smith, who was recently selected for promotion to brigadier general, will succeed Brig. Gen. Clayton B. Vogel as president of the Marine Corps selection board which will convene here Monday.

SMITH

Col. Smith, director of the division of operations and training at Marine Corps Headquarters, served in France in the World War. He received the French Croix de Guerre with Palm for his courage and remarkable ability while serving with the Fourth Marines in Belleau Wood.

After commanding the Marine Barracks here from 1933 until 1935 he served as chief of staff and personnel officer at San Francisco. He returned to Marine Corps Headquarters last year.

Col. Smith holds the Purple Heart, Marine Corps Expeditionary Medal of service in Panama, Santa Domingo and Haiti; Dominican Campaign Medal, and Mexican Service Medal.

Roosevelt to Confer With Bullitt at Resort

Miami, Nov. 30 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France, flew here from Nassau today, shortening his vacation to visit President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga.

Body of Bassett Needn't Appear, Murder Judge Says

Seattle, Nov. 30 (AP).—Judge Chester Batchelor ruled today in the James Eugene Bassett murder trial that the State is not required to produce Bassett's body in evidence, although it must prove death.

Decastro Earl Mayer, 44, and Mrs. Mary Eleanor Smith, 73, are charged with first degree murder of Bassett, an Annapolis, Md. man who disappeared here 10 years ago. His body never was found.

Mayer was convicted as an habitual criminal after Bassett's disappearance, for possessing the latter's automobile and watch. Mrs. Smith, sentenced to five to eight years for grand larceny, confessed just before her release from Washington State Prison that Mayer killed Bassett in her presence.

ADA Rushes Preparation for New Program

Architects Confer
Must Sign Contract
No Money Yet Available

The ways were greased yesterday by the Alley Dwelling Authority for speedy launching of its largest slum reclamation and rehousing program for which a loan of $6,600,000 was approved Tuesday by President Roosevelt.

Members of the authority met architects to outline steps which must be taken to build the 1,257 new homes contemplated.

First step is actual signing of a loan contract with the United States Housing Authority. So far the legal form has not yet been sent to the ADA for its signature, but it is expected within a day or two.

Architects Now Busy

Immediately after signing the contract, 3 per cent of the money will become available for preliminary expenses, such as payment of architects, and for surveys on which detailed plans for the four contemplated projects can be based.

Architects have been busy for several months drawing preliminary plans for the projects, expected to cost $7,336,000. Drawing of the detailed plans must await surveys which will be made as soon as sites for the projects are purchased. So far the ADA has no money for purchase of the sites.

Land Main Obstacle

As the plans go forward, the ADA will also prepare to seek appropriations from Congress for slum reclamation work of a kind not covered by the USHA loan. The last session of Congress authorized the ADA to borrow $1,000,000 a year for five years for such purposes. But in the closing rush it neglected to appropriate the first $1,000,000.

The biggest obstacle now before the ADA is purchase of the land. Although four definite sites are being considered, the authority has numerous other sites in mind in case owners should demand unreasonable prices.

Lima Parley To Discuss Nazi Penetration

Delegates at Panama Hull Cautious on Jews May Talk Informally

By the United Press.

Balboa, C. Z., Nov. 30.—Nazi economic penetration in Latin America may be discussed at the eighth Pan-American Conference, it was indicated today, and the United States is expected to offer its neighbors liberal credits to offset Germany's trade drive.

Persecutions in the Reich may be considered informally at the parley, which opens December 9 in Lima, Peru, it was disclosed with arrival of the United States delegation headed by Secretary of State Hull, aboard the Grace liner Santa Clara.

May Admit Small Quotas

Secretary Hull was reported to be approaching with extreme caution the refugee problem and its related question of finding homes for them in South America.

Latin-American delegates aboard the Santa Clara believe, however, there is little likelihood their countries or the other republics will receive unlimited numbers of refugees, although they admitted the possibility of small quotas.

They pointed out Argentina experimentally tried out a similar colonization of German Jews nearly 40 years ago. Despite financial assistance furnished by Baron Kirsch, practically all settlers moved into cities within two or three years, taking over stores and other commercial business.

"Course Leading to Peace"

In a statement issued at Cristobal, the Secretary of State said the United States and the Latin-American republics were determined to follow the "course leading to peace."

Hull said that Panama, "the crossroads of the New World, where Americans of the South and of the North frequently meet, may well stand as a symbol of that inter-American solidarity which is assuming ever greater significance and importance to all of us."

The Secretary added that "in another sense, the world is at a crossroads today, with our course leading to peace, international order and justice and the welfare of peoples, while the other world take humanity along the road of war, destruction and anarchy."

"At this focal point of inter-American communications by sea and land and air," he said, "we cannot but be impressed by the natural opportunities offered to all of us for a highly profitable interchange."

Roosevelt May Talk

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Lima, Peru, Nov. 30.—President Roosevelt may address the Pan-American Conference by radiotelephone from Washington at its opening session December 9, it was reported tonight, while Peruvian authorities were hopeful he might visit Lima personally before the parley ends.

Diplomatic sources said they anticipated "microscopic attention to all phases of the conference" by Italian, German and Japanese diplomats here. Particular attention was expected to be paid the defense, economic and cultural matters.

Willy Noebel, German Ambassador, who last week presented his credentials to President Oscar Benavides as Ambassador to Peru, already has begun to study the agenda of the conference, particularly the economic angles. German trade with Peru has increased in importance in recent years, as has the Japanese. Italy's strongest ties with this country are chiefly cultural.

Police Hint Women Faked 'Slasher' Acts

London, Nov. 30 (AP).—Scotland Yard detectives and provincial police pondered tonight over the possibility that the phantom "slasher" who has terrorized women of the north country may, after all, actually be a phantom.

Police recalled that all wounds were superficial and wondered whether the victims had mutilated themselves in an odd hysterical craving for publicity after the first, and probably authentic, assault.

Colombia Resumes Relations With Reich

Fascists Shout Against French Rule in Tunis

Ciano Raises Issue Deputies Cheer Their Last Session

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 30.—Fascist deputies shouted a challenge to French control over Tunisia today in the last session of the 78-year-old chamber.

Taking their cue from a speech by Foreign Minister Ciano, who referred to Italy's "interests and aspirations," they raised a cry of: "Tunisia! Tunisia!" About half the white population of Tunisia is Italian.

Andre Francois-Poncet, new French Ambassador to Rome, listened from the diplomatic box.

The chamber, which is to be supplanted by a new lower house composed of representatives of Fascist units and guilds, met only to hear Count Ciano's address and to ratify cabinet decrees, and to vote itself out of existence.

Tunisia, French protectorate on the north coast of Africa, long has been a source of friction between France and Italy, and the Fascist press recently has increased attacks upon France's rule of the territory.

Italy thought her claims were disregarded in 1881 when France established the protectorate. Soon after, Italy became an ally of Germany and Austro-Hungary.

Fascists interpreted the complete absence of any mention of France in Ciano's hour-long speech, followed by the deputies' shouts, as an indication of strong feeling against France.

Tunisia—or Tunis—lies between the Mediterranean, Algeria and the Sahara, and has an area of about 44,920 square miles and a population of about 2,000,000. France has guaranteed special Italian rights by treaty.

Contrasting with the attitude toward France in the chamber was applause for Great Britain.

Yangtze Opened For U. S. Gunboats

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 1 (U.P.). Navigation conditions in the Yangtze River have improved to a point where it will be safe for American, British and French warships, long bottled up in the middle reaches of the river, to return to Shanghai for overhauling, Rear Admiral Koshiro Oikawa, Japanese naval commander, said today.

A number of United States gunboats of the Yangtze River patrol, including the Monocacy which narrowly escaped destruction by Chinese floating mines while anchored off Kiukiang, probably will come to Shanghai shortly. No movements will be made, however, until orders are received from Washington.

New Trade Pact With Cuba Slated, Welles Announces

By the Associated Press.

The State Department announced yesterday that it intended to negotiate a supplementary trade agreement with Cuba and called public hearings, beginning January 3.

Sumner Welles, acting Secretary of State, said the only Cuban products involved were sugar, tobacco and tobacco products, rum and potatoes.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, subsequently said he had received assurances from Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, that no informal promises had been made to Cuba that the sugar tariff would be reduced.

Reports from Havanna had said the duty would be lowered from 90 to 75 cents a hundred pounds.

The Senator pointed out that in any event the amount of sugar Cuba may ship to this country could not be increased by a trade agreement, since import quotas are fixed by the sugar act of 1938 which he and Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, sponsored.

Mosley Admits He's Married and Has a New Son

London, Nov. 30 (AP).—Sir Oswald Mosley, British Fascist leader, announced today that he married blonde, Nazi-admiring Mrs. Diana Guiness about two years ago and that a son was born to them last Saturday.

In a long statement in Action, the journal of the British Union of Fascists, Sir Oswald said, "it is now necessary to publish the facts of my marriage," and "both mother and son are doing well."

The statement omitted the place and exact date of the ceremony.

Navy Approves San Juan Air Base

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Nov. 30 (AP).—The United States Navy Department has approved a proposal for building a naval air base on Isla Grande in San Juan harbor and asked the Puerto Rico government today that the site be transferred to strengthen Atlantic defenses. The insular government already had started building an airport on Isla Grande.

A preliminary estimate set the cost at $4,000,000.

Flesh Vs. Steel Is Too Uneven, Says Dr. Hu

Scores 'Over-Optimism' Miss Utley Speaks Assails Trade With Japan

In the "combating of steel with human flesh" there is a definite limit," Dr. Hu Shih, Chinese Ambassador, declared yesterday as he warned against the "over-optimism" which well-wishers of China have in regard to her ability to hold out forever against the Japanese.

His remarks followed a speech by Freda Utley, British author of "Japan's Feet of Clay," at a luncheon by the American Committee for Non-Participation in Japanese Aggression at the Republic Restaurant. Miss Utley asserted that unless "Great Britain and the United States stop helping Japan by selling her materials of war the breaking point is coming soon."

"Not that I believe that the Chinese ever will submit to Japanese rule," she declared, "but that the time during which China can continue to hold together as a democratic nation is not unlimited.

"Any militaristic dictator who might arise and try to make partial peace with Japan, in my opinion, would lead his nation into a civil war."

England is "ready now to call the Japanese bluff," Miss Utley said, "but the United States is not ready now. This country does not trust England, nor can I blame it for that."

Britain Plans To Beat Nazis' Europe Trade

To Organize Fight Claims 'Advantage' Assails Reich Methods

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 30.—Unless Germany drops the trading methods which are giving her a "stranglehold" in central and southeastern Europe, British industry will fight and beat the Nazis at their own game, a spokesman for the British government warned tonight in the House of Commons.

The spokesman, Robert S. Hudson, secretary to the department of overseas trade, disclosed the government is already helping domestic industries to organize in order to meet the totalitarian challenge.

"Clearly this country is—I was going to say stronger than any other country in the world—certainly stronger than any of the totalitarian states and, therefore, we have a great advantage, an advantage which, I believe, will result in our wining the fight," he said.

"Must Organize"

"But it is an essential preliminary that our own industries should be organized. Where they have been organized they have succeeded in the last few months in making satisfactory agreements with their opposite numbers in Germany."

Hudson said the basis for Germany's trade supremacy in central and southeastern Europe seemed to be that Germany paid the producers in those areas much more than world prices at the expense of the Germany people.

"By these methods," he continued, "Germany is obtaining a stranglehold on these various countries, a mechanized stranglehold at the cost of her own people and, in fact, exporting her goods at less than cost prices.

Nations "Hate" Process

"Every country in central and southeastern Europe hates this process. They are all afraid of being economically strangled by Germany and they continually turn to us and ask us to help them out."

Earlier, Britain's determination to build its air force up to parity with that of any power within striking distance of the British Isles was reaffirmed in Commons by Prime Minister Chamberlain.

At the same time he repeated previous assurances that the government was considering the limitation of armaments by international agreement "as a first step toward practical abolition."

Invitation to Arms Cut

This was construed as an invitation to Reichsfuehrer Hitler to hurry up and propose his much advertised scheme for a four-power agreement, limiting the air forces of Britain, France, Germany and Italy to the present strength of the Reich.

If Hitler acted now, Downing Street believes much of the anti-German feeling aroused here by the persecution of the Jews might be dissipated by a campaign to prove Hitler's good faith for "appeasement."

Czechs Elect Hacha; Beran New Premier

Gen. Syrovy Is Out Cabinet Being Formed German Slant Expected

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Nov. 30. — Shrunken Czecho-Slovakia today started building a new government whose policies were expected to be molded to German needs and demands.

Parliament elected Dr. Emil Hacha president by 272 votes of 312 cast. He is 66, former president of the Supreme Court Administration, and a political newcomer. His election was a foregone conclusion.

His first act was to accept the resignation of Premier Gen. Jan Syrovy, one-eyed army inspector who took the premiership in the midst of the September crisis that led to the cession of more than 11,000 square miles of Szech-Slovak territory to Germany, Hungary and Poland.

Rudolf Beran, a deputy, chairman of the newly-formed Party of National Unity and a conservative who frequently opposed policies of former President Benes, was asked by Hacha to form a new cabinet.

Beran gave a clew to his political viewpoint in an address to a party caucus:

"Even in a reduced state one can lead a full life nationally, economically and politically. We must learn from our past experience. An honest, loyal policy must be adopted toward our neighbors and the entire world.

"In rearing a state upon the new foundations, care must be taken that Czecho-Slovakia does not miss the connections and does not arrive too late."

Prague Schools Bar Jews

Nazis Adopt Czarist 'Pale Of Settlement'

Jewish Areas Limited Provinces to Set Bounds 'Curfew' Made General

By Ralph W. Barnes

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Nov. 30.—Carrying forward ruthlessly their policy of isolating the Jews in Germany, the Nazi authorities reverted today to the principle of the "pale of settlement," of Czarist Russia with a decree which paves the way for the establishment of the Ghetto in the full medieval sense of the term.

The decree delegates full power to provincial governors throughout the Reich to ban Jews from certain districts.

So far, information is unavailable as to how extensive the "quarantine" districts may be.

As a general rule, in the Russia of the Czars, Jews were forbidden to live outside a "pale of settlement" in the southern and western provinces of the Russian Empire.

"Curfew" Made General

Generalizing the "Jewish curfew" measure for Saturday of this week—announced yesterday—the decree also authorizes the provincial governors to prohibit Jews from showing themselves in public at certain hours. Infractions will be punishable by fines up to 150 marks or imprisonment up to six weeks.

An additional decree, supplementary to the German municipal law, provides legal means for excluding Jews from municipal baths, parks, commons and the like. Since the Nazis assumed power, various municipalities have issued such regulations on their own authority. Today's measures appear to provide a legal basis on a nation-wide scale for the measure.

At Frankfort-on-Main, three synagogues, damaged in the nation-wide holocaust of Jewish temples on Black Thursday, were ordered wholly demolished on the ground that they were a "menace to public safety."

Figures now available show that in the course of the current terror more than 500 synagogues were wholly or partially destroyed by Nazi wreckers.

Suicides Mount

Berlin, Nov. 30 (AP).—A wave of Jewish suicides was reported by responsible persons today to have spread throughout Germany.

Rabbis worked overtime conducting funerals. They and other authoritative sources were forbidden to disclose how many killed themselves or died suddenly from causes attributed directly to anti-Jewish actions.

A new attack on the United States was opened by the newspaper Fraenkische Tageszeitung, organ of strongly anti-Jewish Julius Streicher, Nazi leader of Franconia.

The newspaper called the United States a "land of lynch justice, kidnaping, false prophets and strip dancers" and added:

"While America mixes in the most violent manner in the inner affairs of Germany and laments over the Jews without helping them, it forgets completely to tend to its own affairs. They are dirty enough and we all have reason enough to remind them."

Guards Slay Rumanian 'Hitler,' 13 Aides in 'Escape' Attempt

Beset by internal strife and eyed covetously by her neighbors, King Carol's rich kingdom has strengthened its drive against Fascist groups. Police reported Corneliu Codreanu (inset), imprisoned "Iron guard" Fascist leader, and 13 others killed in an attempted prison delivery at Rumnik-Sarat, while in Cluj and Cernauti they investigated terrorist threats to kill provincial governors. The shaded portions, coveted by other countries, are (1) Hungary's one-time Transylvania, (2) Russia's former Bessarabia, and (3) Bulgaria's former Dobrogea. Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, Nov. 30.—Rumania's "Little Hitler" was slain today in a mass killing which wiped out the leadership of the outlawed Fascist Iron Guard.

Corneliu Zelea Codreanu, 39, chieftain of the secret organization, and 13 of his followers fell this morning on the road from Rumnik-Sarat Prison to Bucharest under the volley of a prison guard detail. An official announcement said they had tried to escape.

Five hours later they were buried secretly in a prison graveyard and tonight no one in Rumania challenged the royal dictatorship of King Carol.

[The Iron Guard tonight warned Carol to "make peace with the Rumanian people or we will find another solution," the United Press said. The warning was made in pamphlets slipped under householders' doors.

[Carol met the threat by instructing police to shoot to kill without warning" in emergencies and ordered authorities to dispense with legal restrictions to suppress Fascist terrorism. Wholesale arrests were made.—Editor's note.]

Codreanu was serving a sentence for treason at Rumnik-Sarat, 10 miles from the capital, but had been taken with the 13 others in open cars for a trip under guard to Bucharest for questioning concerning an attack attributed to Iron Guardists.

The case was that of Florry Stefanescu Coranga, rector of the University of Cluj, who was shot and critically wounded Monday.

The police account of today's shooting said the procession of automobiles was halted a short distance from the prison by armed men who rushed from a roadside woods.

The prisoners disregarded orders to remain in the automobiles, it was said, and there was a blast of gunfire in which all 14 were killed. The guards were exonerated.

Guardist secret councils in the last few days were reported marking several prominent government leaders for death.

and telephone service have been assured, and the children have found their schools open. In Paris areas the transportation system has functioned normally. All the vital activities of the country have been freely carried on. In private industry the cessation of work has been only partial. Order has not been seriously troubled."

It was estimated that essential public services were maintained throughout the country up to 80 and 90 per cent of normal. The ministry of public works said train services were 99 per cent normal, and that the trains were running on scheduled time.

The government took great precaution to guard against public disorders by posting troops at railway stations in Paris, and the mobile guards at the banks.

Disturbances of consequence were reported only from Lille, Clermont-Ferrand and Toulouse.

A serious incident occurred in Lille, where several hundred striking metal workers tried to hold up the streetcars. They forced the passengers to alight, and then smashed the windows with stones. A strong detachment of Mobile Guards was summoned, and after a fight lasting several minutes, dispersed the rioters by charging them with the butt end of their rifles.

At Toulouse the mobile guards had to intervene to restore order when a crowd of 2,000 workers, singing "The Internationale" attempted to close the doors of a big department store. Three policemen and the mayor of the city were injured.

In Paris the police arrested 470 but no serious disorders occurred in this city.

[Workers showed their temper by clashing with police at Lyon, Nantes, Dieppe, Grenoble and Marseille after the enforced working hours, the Associated Press said.—Editor's note.]

Tonight Jouhaux told the press that he was "not dissatisfied with the results of the general strike." He attributed the failure of the C. G. T. to tie up the transportation system of the country and its capital, to the requisition of the railroads by the government and the military measures employed by the premier.

An extraordinary session of the national council of the confederation has been summoned in Paris Monday to consider how to retrieve the defeat. Jouhaux said that he did not "think that the results of the strike would have repercussions on the trade union movement."

Undoubtedly, however, French labor leaders have been discredited.

When the C. G. T. learned Daladier was going to employ all the resources of the law and the state to maintain the authority of the government, Jouhaux and his colleagues would gladly have backed out if the government had permitted them to do so by "saving their face," but Daladier was determined once and for all to demonstrate to French labor that law was supreme.

Undoubtedly certain reactionary employers will attempt to exploit today's defeat of labor, but the action of Daladier in ordering the requisitioning of the Michelin factory at Clermont-Ferrand this afternoon, upon being informed that Michelin had closed his plant, indicates that the premier does not intend to permit the victory of the government to be abused.

Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, said last night in one of his regular talks over Station WRC, that the failure of the general strike in France, hailed by the French government as a victory of democracy over unrest and disorder is not the kind of victory democracy needs.

Japanese Puppet Says He Plans to Rule All Mongolia

Hoho (Kewisui), Suiyuan Province, China, Nov. 30 (AP).—Prince Teh, head of the Japanese-established "Inner Mongolian Nation," said today he hoped to unite all of Mongolia, including Soviet-Russian dominated Outer Mongolio, under one rule.

(Such a move would eliminate Outer Mongolia as a buffer state between Soviet Russia and Japanese-dominated parts of China and extend some 1,800 miles the frontier between Russia and Japanese-ruled areas.)

Japanese officials, who control the Mongol-staffed government of this "nation" athwart the old caravan route between China and Russia, declared Teh's regime had played an important role in Japan's plans for conquest, since it had compelled the Chinese and Russians to go nearly 2,000 miles further inland to establish direct contact.

Leni Riefenstahl Reported Barred From Film Studios

Hollywood, Nov. 30 (AP).—Controversy continued today over the visit here of Leni Riefenstahl, German actress and film producer, who has denied that she is "Hitler's girl friend" or "head of the Nazi film industry."

The Hollywood Daily Variety, film trade paper, printed a report that she had "found studio gates locked against her entry."

"Attache of German consulate," said Variety, "who sought to pave way for actress-director to enter lots was met with word that 'American films are barred from Germany, so we have nothing to show Miss Riefenstahl that would interest her.'"

Dr. Georg Gyssling, German consul for Los Angeles, denied the report.

The Tax Hearings

No category of laws affects the individual more vitally than taxes. For that reason the hearings conducted by the District Tax Advisory Committee are an important step in the overhauling of Washington's revenue system.

It does not appear, however, that the committee has as yet received any clear-cut indication of what taxes the people of the District prefer to pay. Too many spokesmen are more interested in the pocketbooks of groups they represent than in working out a local revenue system that would be fair to every one. When testimony of this sort comes from many different sources the varieties of special pleading tend to cancel out.

The effect of this is to increase the responsibility of the advisory committee, and of the experts conducting the study of local revenue laws for the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. The element of balance which interested groups ignore must be supplied by the experts. Their task is to view the needs and resources of the District as a whole and to recommend a well-rounded tax program, placing the heaviest burdens where they can be carried with a minimum of economic dislocation.

It is notable, however, that on some points there is substantial agreement among the witnesses. Most of them believe that a larger Federal payment to the District is equitable as an offset to the vast amount of tax-exempt property here.

There also seems to be general opposition to any increase in the basic tax on real estate. That levy bears directly or indirectly on every family, without consideration of ability to pay. And since it provides such a large percentage of the District's revenue, the alternative arguments of several groups for a graduated income tax that would exempt the poor, become the more impressive.

The investigators must remember that their job is to devise a permanent tax system and not a mere expedient. That assignment would fully justify them in ignoring emergency proposals, as well as past rejections by Congress of hastily devised income tax plans.

P. O.'s And I. Q.'s

One William H. Dunmeyer, postmaster of Atlantic Beach, N. Y., was very much astonished recently to find himself under arrest. The charge against him was that he had appropriated postoffice receipts to his own use.

What astounded Postmaster Dunmeyer was not the charge itself, but the discovery that he was required under the law to remit all money he received from the sale of stamps, money orders and so on to the Government.

It was a great shock to him, apparently. He had put a great deal of—well, not exactly thought, perhaps, but certainly a great deal of time and enthusiasm, into promoting the business of the Atlantic Beach postoffice. When he took it over not enough stamps were being sold to warrant him keeping it open more than a few of the several hours a day prescribed by law.

So, as soon as he could, he moved it to another location and invested a lot of his own money in decorations and some more in an advertising campaign urging the people of Atlantic Beach to write more letters and buy more stamps. If the commodity had been peanuts or potato chips instead of postage, it might have grown into another of these miniature success stories so often written up in the magazines.

But as it turned out, alas, Mr. Dunmeyer was sentenced on Tuesday to 366 days in jail. The Federal judge, however, suspended the sentence because, he said, he felt Mr. Dunmeyer was entirely too stupid to know what a postoffice was all about and that it was the people who appointed Mr. Dunmeyer who were really to blame.

There are, to be sure, certain eerie thoughts that suggest themselves about this case. One is that if the discovery of Mr. Dunmeyer's innocent embezzlements had been delayed a little, he would presumably have been reappointed under the "merit system," as provided in the recent civil service extension bill, since Atlantic Beach is listed in the Postal Guide as a third class postoffice.

Another is the question of whether Mr. Dunmeyer is really much dumber than the rest of us. The idea that the Government can and ought to set up everybody in some kind of business is widely held. And if such an idea is, per se, an indication of imbecility, then the intellectual level of these United States is low indeed.

Somewhat Premature

The unexpected announcement by Col. Fulgencio Batista, Cuban dictator, that he had reached an agreement with the United States for a reduction in sugar duties must have fallen upon the Department of State with the force of a bombshell. Of course Col. Batista, being a dictator, probably does not understand that in the United States promises of this kind are necessarily provisional, and that it is wise to maintain silence until all legal formalities have been observed.

Col. Batista could not be expected to know that even under the wide powers given the Executive to change tariffs, a quite elaborate procedure for prior consultation is enjoined. For example, it is specifically stated in the law that before concluding any trade agreement with a foreign country "any interested person may have an opportunity to present his views." Furthermore, the President must seek information and advice in advance from the United States Tariff Commission, as well as from the Departments of State, Agriculture, and Commerce. Thereafter he may ignore the tendered advice, but the forms must be observed.

However, the Department of State has taken great pains to improve the machinery for negotiating trade agreements so as to give fuller opportunities to all interested private groups to put this Government in possession of pertinent information possessed by businessmen and ascertain their views of proposed tariff changes. Speaking at a World Trade dinner about a year ago, Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, said:

"Realizing full well that democratic administrative processes can function most effectively only if there be available full information from interested sections of the public, we have constantly striven to improve the effectiveness of this committee, (i. e., the Committee for Reciprocity Information), both in its personnel and procedure."

To those skeptics who have sometimes doubted whether written and oral representations have had much effect upon the course of negotiations, Col. Batista's unfortunate revelations about a program yet to be consummated will seem to be a confirmation of their worst suspicions. They will not be propitiated by subsequent issuance by the Department of State of an announcement of intention to consider changes in the import duties on sugar and a few other items. They will wonder just how the promises of reductions which Col. Batista says he obtained are to be reconciled with the Department of State's later assurance that "due consideration will be given * * * to all representations which may be made to the Committee for Reciprocity Information regarding any provisions of the agreement with respect to which the interested persons may feel that adjustments are necessary."

Moreover, Col. Batista has magnanimously consented to establish a tariff-free rice quota and lower duties on rice coming from this country in exchange for sugar concessions. We may be sure that the rice growers of Louisiana and the producers of other products for which lower duties are promised will not be slow in pressing their claims. As we have been trying with might and main to reduce preferences which operate to our disadvantage in trade with Canada and Great Britain, there is danger that Col. Batista's generosity may antagonize those sections of the British Empire which already pay much higher duties on exports of rice to Cuba.

In short there seems to be no doubt that somebody made a serious strategic blunder in not putting Col. Batista wise to the unfortunate consequences of mentioning tariff concessions before we had gone through the usual forms of discussion and deliberation prescribed by law and regulations.

Co-operative Program

Speaking at Cristobal, in the Canal Zone, on his way to the Lima conference, Secretary Hull emphasized the natural opportunity offered to all the American republics "for a highly profitable interchange." Such interchange, he added, "is not only that of trade, but the more important exchange of ideas, culture and friendship."

That this idea represents much more than a banquet phrase is evidenced by the current report of the Administration's inter-departmental committee on co-operation with the American republics. This document cites no fewer than 74 projects, each of them calculated to tighten the links of friendship uniting us with our neighbors to our south.

These projects cover a wide range. They provide for a wider dissemination in Latin America of information regarding the United States and vice versa; for an exchange of technical personnel in certain governmental services; for co-operative research enterprises and other types of combined effort. Science, education, health, transportation, government administration are all encompassed in this plan.

The approach, even as the idea behind it, is thoroughly constructive. It is a tribute to the labors of an able committee which, under the chairmanship of Mr. Sumner Welles, the Acting Secretary of State, spent six months in canvassing the ground and preparing the report. But the committee's labors were made easier by the fact that over a period of many years the ground had been prepared.

Of the 74 projects cited a great many are already operative and require no additional appropriations. Others represent an expansion of existing undertakings. Only a few of the projects are brand new. In other words, what is now required to bring about a better understanding between the United States and its fellow republics of this hemisphere is largely the more intensive cultivation of a field already ploughed, sown and watered.

Daladier's Triumph

By its very nature a general strike is a revolutionary action. It is a concerted use of labor power, applied on a nation-wide scale, against a government. If the government is itself acting illegally, beyond the confines of its constitutional powers, the use of direct action against its policies might be justified. But no such justification is possible when a democratic administration is operating under clearly-defined authority, approved by its duly elected legislature.

The abortive attempt of the French Confederation of Labor (the famous C. G. T.) to coerce the Daladier government was not less revolutionary because the general strike called yesterday was announced as of only 24 hours duration. This limitation would make the unsuspecting believe that only a gesture of protest was contemplated. But every communist knows that the revolutionary value of a general strike lies in the ease with which it can be pushed out of control. Advance announcement of a time limit for the protest is primarily eye-wash for the simple-minded.

The French communists, however, met their master in Premier Daladier. With perfect coolness he exposed the issue for what it was; cheerfully accepted the challenge of the C. G. T.; mobilized sufficient force to show that he meant business and thereby called the bluff of the radical leadership. The complete fiasco of yesterday's general strike in France shows how little real revolutionary intent there is among the workers of that country.

By his good judgment and determination Premier Daladier has done much more than avert a serious threat to domestic order. He has made the C. G. T. look ridiculous, which in France is equivalent to an enormous loss of prestige. He has further accomplished the disintegration of the so-called "popular front" opposition by driving a wedge between the communists and the moderates in French trade unionism. That is politically important because the isolation of the communists in industry will be reflected by their isolation in the Chamber of Deputies, where they have a block of some 70 members.

A less intelligent man than Daladier might now overplay his hand. A premier of reactionary instincts would be inclined to follow his smashing victory over communism by attempting to penalize the great mass of loyal French workers. No blunder of that sort need be anticipated in the case of the man who is now bending all his energies to leading France out of her extremely serious economic and financial predicament. For Daladier is a real liberal—one who is opposed to coercive tactics whether applied from left or right.

The decree laws against which the French general strike was nominally directed must be confirmed by the legislature. They undoubtedly bear heavily on the working-class population, for one of their major objectives is to set aside operation of a large part of the social-reform legislation of 1936, which has led to the present catastrophic fall in French production. The collapse of the ill-judged general strike, however, makes parliamentary confirmation of Daladier's careful program a virtual certainty.

Seizing the opportunity offered him the French premier has broken the left-wing opposition, both in the factories and in the legislature. He has now more chance to unify his nation, and more power to prosecute a constructive program in both domestic and international affairs, than has been the lot of any French premier for several years.

It is wondered why persons who know exactly how to run the world write newspaper columns instead.

You may have noticed that a bagpipe-player invariably walks briskly around as he plays. He's harder to hit that way.

It's a great pity a country can't have free speech without having so many free speakers.

The best way to preserve a lie is to mix a lot of truth with it.

A Falsehood Nailed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Friends today called my attention to your column, "The New Yorker," by Leonard Lyons, who on November 24 said: "The two German members of the National Press Club in Washington declined to attend the club's dinner to President Roosevelt on Saturday."

I am the only German correspondent residing in Washington who is a member of the National Press Club. I attended the dinner, as I have every annual dinner for the last 11 years, provided I was in town. Tickets were on sale from a Wednesday at 1 p. m. I was at the office of the National Press Club that Wednesday at 1:30 p. m., paid my 6 "bucks" and sat through the six hours of the dinner, enjoying the "on the record" program. I am sure that most of my newspaper friends have seen me, as I had a seat at the center table.

Mr. Lyons should check on the stories before he writes them. I do not care what he writes about me, but I resent the implication he tries to convey to the public without being sure of the facts.

Charity To The Chinese

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just a few words for the record.

Not so many months ago the Japs were pounding hell out of Shanghai and its environs. Among the debris, in the aftermath, was found what had once been a noble edifice. There the basic factors in our Christian religion had been propounded for the benefit of the heathen Chinese, plus hospitalization, clothes and food!

The morning after the Jap bombing the gentlemen who control the financial destiny of the building, rushed hell-bent for the State Department. So while Cordell Hull was looking the situation over, I proceeded to do likewise.

In the immediate area surrounding the national headquarters of the boys who control the destiny of the building, I found to my utter disgust a number of children and grown persons, with about the same percentage of Christianity as they had food, clothes and shelter. Charity begins in China?

Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the 400,000,000 heathen have been converted to Christianity at a cost to the people of this country of millions of dollars annually.

Johnson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Albert S. Brown favors a movement for Johnson for Congress, I heartily second that motion. In fact I believe we might safely step him up to the Senate. The fact that he is not a talking machine is no reason why he wouldn't be qualified for the highest legislative body. He has both honesty and common sense, a quality most men prefer to light-headed gabbing. Just suppose we had a full crew of such men to turn the old ship of state over to in 1940.

More About The Jefferson Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is the second time in my life that I have entered a protest concerning civic affairs through the medium of the press, and I feel justified on this occasion in aligning myself with the thousands who are opposed to cutting down the cherry trees and the erection of the Jefferson Memorial in one of the most beautiful spots in Washington.

By virtue of my occupation, I have occasion to go down Seventeenth street, east on Constitution avenue, nearly every day, having done so for many years. The only red traffic light I welcome is that at Seventeenth street and Constitution avenue, because it gives me a few seconds to look off into the beautiful vista of Potomac Park. The statue of John Paul Jones causes a slight break in this vista, but a mass of marble, such as the Jefferson Memorial, will forever shut off that superb view.

Surely there are enough stone monstrosities along Constitution avenue to satisfy those whose ambition is to destroy the "magnificent distances" for which Washington has been famous since it was first planned. Nor should a questionable decision by the Fine Arts Commission and the Committee for the Jefferson Memorial be validated over the protests of the majority of Washington residents and the millions throughout the States.

There have been submitted numerous practical suggestions as to a suitable memorial, none of which approve a duplicated structure, the majority opposing proximity to the perfect Lincoln Memorial, and many indorsing a high elevation, appropriately nearer the Capitol and Supreme Court. A survey might disclose a site conspicuous from and above the Potomac which would create a marvelous picture, comparable to that of the Washington Cathedral on Mount St. Albans.

There enters into the controversy a serious aspect of another nature, when the highest representative of the people cheapens his opinion by such expressions as "flimflam" and the suggestion that "trees, chains and women all be transplanted"—if correctly quoted. It is also suggestive of Nazi methods (certainly not Jeffersonian) that a community as large as the District of Columbia be at the mercy of some few who are determined to gain their point. It may be logically suggested that we "look into the record," for I strongly suspect there is a skeleton in the closet.

J. L. T.
Washington, Nov. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Indeed there is much flimflam about the Jefferson Memorial, and it is not connected with fascistic cherry trees.

Here was Jefferson, a democrat, who would serve the people in life and in death, a proponent of public education all his life, a scientific man concerned with the advance of science, a bookish man who built libraries. Why should he have a tomb of classic inutility? Jefferson's memorial should be a popular college for young people who will not go to denominational schools or who can not afford the high tuition of local institutions.

Voteless Washington is larger than many States, and it has more tax-exempt property than some States. Local colleges do not reciprocate with free scholarships, as they well might. Unlike States and more advanced cities, Washington has no low-tuition, secular college outside of normal institutions to which graduates from the high schools can proceed. Such a college would serve a public need and would be a worthy monument to a great democrat who believed in all the people.

Yours for higher educational institutions in the District of Columbia.

GLADYS ATBEE.

The Elections

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The bi-election results of 1938 have given the Republican Party very little to use as a base of operation outside of Pennsylvania. But in this Keystone State the Republican Senator is constitutionally barred from becoming President, and the Federal patronage will be controlled by Senator Guffey and not by the new Republican Governor.

Attorney Dewey has definitely been shelved, and the only possibility of a candidate to lead the Republican Party in 1940 is Senator-elect Taft of Ohio. But no comfort can come to Mr. Taft from the Ohio State organization which is headed by a Democratic Governor nor can he gain help in a Democratic Senate, where he will be a freshman till time for the campaigns.

Every majority party loses to some extent in bi-election years. The small losses for the Democrats were four years late in arriving. This leaves the Administration in the same dominant position that a majority party usually has in the first two years of power.

There is little doubt that the Democratic Party will be replaced in 1940. This leaves three names to consider for President: Mr. Roosevelt, who can have the third term if he wants it; Senator Barkley, who is the liberal, and Senator Clark, the conservative. The country is definitely not going to elect a conservative in any party. So the net results indicate that President Roosevelt will control the political scene past 1940. Whether he will do the job personally or turn it over to Senator Barkley will be his pleasure to decide. He still has that power.

"The Whole Cake"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the front page of The Post dated November 29 I read of the sad plight of a Polish Jewish family who arrived in this country last April and the father and three sons are only earning $95 a week among them.

They had to deposit $5,000 to guarantee they would not become public charges so now they are on the road to riches they want what is left of their money so they can invest it. How many of our American families are making $95 a week?

I believe in being charitable but charity begins at home and I think it high time Americans put a stop to this immigration racket and think of our own poor-oppressed people. I have never seen an immigrant yet satisfied with one piece of cake, he must have the whole cake.

Just imagine an American family going into any foreign country and in the short space of six months being able to earn $95 per week. Is it any wonder why a foreigner believes American streets are paved with gold?

The Telephone In 1876

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your very interesting article about long-distance telephoning with the picture of two people a few feet apart talking over 3,000 miles of wire reminds me that in 1876 at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition I talked in the same room with Alexander Graham Bell through two telephone sets and was told that there was 5 miles of wire between us. That was in my opinion an even greater achievement in science than what was shown in your picture. A few days after this conversation with Mr. Bell there was a newspaper review of the telephone, describing it as an interesting laboratory development but without commercial or practical value.

The Euthanasial Snatch

CALIFORNIA, the Nation's current No. 1 magic test tube for the political and social sciences, has just produced from its hat what has every earmark of being its very best rabbit to date. News comes from the Panacea State that a certain Mr. Harry Barbour a candidate for the California State Assembly, who disappeared last August in San Francisco, reappeared after the election at the Los Angeles Hall of Justice with the story that he had been held captive for three months in an adobe hut by kidnapers.

If the data from a single test case may be accepted as at least a straw in the definitive wind, the importance of this precedent to the Nation can scarcely be overestimated. Here we have a candidate for public office—presumably a candidate undesirable to at least a sufficient number of electors to make up a kidnaping party. What method of organization they pursued we may never know, nor is it in any way essential that we should know. We are, by and large, a resourceful people. We can devise our own ways and means.

The important fact for us to note is that to certain California citizens the appearance of Mr. Barbour on the stump was an undesirable eventuality and they took definite and entirely successful steps to prevent it. Mr. Barbour, quietly and without fanfare, disappears from his customary haunts. Three months later he reappears, having spent all that time, he says, in an adobe hut. The walls of adobe huts are celebrated for their reticence. They have that on candidates.

Some persons may be disgruntled because the California experiment was announced too late for any application of it to be made on a national scale at the late elections, but the philosophical will solace themselves with the reflection that we cannot have everything the moment we want it and that other elections will be coming along.

Indeed, the glittering project evoked in the imagination by the data from California is one which should not be entered upon lightly or without profound premeditation. Plans must be laid soundly, else fiasco may well result instead of the golden silence of kidnaped and muted candidates. Before any action is taken, indeed before any plans are drawn, careful study should be devoted to all available data from the California laboratory.

A fact that at once strikes the eye is that one of the primary ingredients of this great political experiment, the adobe hut, is unavailable on a national scale. This, it must be admitted, presents a problem, but certainly not an insoluble one. Adobe huts might be made available throughout the land through an understanding with the Housing Administration. If no sympathy were encountered here, the large centers of population might feasibly sneak a few adobe huts into their slum-clearance projects.

A second question which arises is, how many electors should there be in each band of candidate kidnapers? This need present no difficulties. The number should be elastic, depending upon the importance of the candidate, in no case less than three voting kidnapers. Three, together with the kidnaped candidate, would make the requisite four for bridge, which seems to be the accepted mode of kidnapers and kidnapee for whiling the weeks away.

Important candidates—candidates for governorships and the Senate—should have the attention of considerably larger bands of kidnapers. Numerous decks of cards should be provided for these expeditioners, perhaps even dice in extreme cases, for in any large gathering there are always a few who prefer traffic with the galloping dominoes to the slower routine of contract. And there is no reason why these affairs should not be made as pleasant for all actively concerned as for the Nation at large.

It might be wise in the beginning not to provide radios, at least until the kidnaping technique has been perfected on a national scale. Of course, once this is accomplished, there should be no sound reason for not tuning in on any and every candidateless station in the land.

Successful application of the California technique on a nation-wide scale would, I am sure, do more than any single thing yet devised to relieve the unemployment situation. Let us say that six or seven hundred thousand candidates seek some office or other in the United States at election time. Counting the primaries, there may be more than this, but let us take the more conservative figure. The number of these who are deaf and dumb (in the oral sense) may be discounted.

Allowing an average of five kidnapers to each candidate—surely a small average—that would give employment to upward of 3,000,000 persons, each probably having a family of three or four persons. If the ransoms (to be paid out of the party war chests for campaign purposes) were merely reasonable, the economic condition of the American people would be immensely bettered, buying power would be increased and the road to rehabilitation wide open.

No scheme having such wide ramifications could be expected to prove 100 per cent operable. There doubtless always would be a sprinkling of candidates for whom no one, not even their parties, would pay ransom. Well, these could be safely released. I venture to say, at the end of the campaign—safely, because few candidates so humiliated by not being ransomed would ever have the face to run again. Or would they?

WARNER OLIVIER.

Advice To LaGuardia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Headline in The Post of November 10 states, "Progressives Need to Unite, LaGuardia says." Let me say to LaGuardia that the real honest to goodness Progressives did unite and gave you Tory New Dealers the shock of your life. You had better wake up and get in line with the "Real Progressives" before "Finis" is written after the name "Tory New Dealers."

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Fascism

FATHER COUGHLIN was correct in contending that many Jews have been vigorous Communists in Russia and elsewhere, but it would be equally unfair to members of his own faith in the United States to point out that fascism started in a Catholic country and that a Catholic cardinal welcomed the Nazis to Austria.

PEGLER

Father Coughlin said that by their failure to use the press the radio and the banking houses, "where they stand so prominently," to fight communism as vigorously as they fight Nazi fascism, the Jews invite the charge of being supporters of communism.

If that is so, however, it must follow that American Catholics have a similar obligation to oppose fascism and naziism as vigorously as they fight communism. It will be conceded, I suppose, that both communism and Nazi fascism are equally inimical to the American ideal and that Nazi fascism is more actively dangerous to this country at the moment.

IT WOULD BE foolish to pretend that the hatred of Nazi fascism among Jews is purely intellectual and political. It would be hated much less if it were not anti-Semitic, and some Jews might even indorse it as a system of government. But the Jesuits themselves are communists in a sense, and the Catholic opposition to communism is largely due to religious considerations.

The Nazis persecute Jews. Therefore Jews cry "outrage!" and hate naziism.

The Spanish loyalists persecute Catholics. Therefore the Catholic clergy and press and many of the laymen also cry "outrage!" and hate the loyalist side.

But it is no more true to say that all American Jews are communists or fellow-travelers or to accuse them of tolerating communism than it is to say that American Catholics are Nazi fascists or that they sympathize with Italy and Germany, which, in league with Japan, are fomenting hostility toward this country's ideals and material interests.

FATHER COUGHLIN will yet turn out to be the greatest aid and comfort to the recurrent anti-Catholic movement in the United States. These waves rise and fall; and when the next one sweeps along, great emphasis will be placed on reports of an open-air meeting in Brooklyn during the Presidential campaign of 1936 at which Father Coughlin, of Detroit, a Catholic priest and politician, was attended by an honorary bodyguard of armed and uniformed men.

This incident will be exploited as evidence of a private militia, and although neither Catholics nor the Catholic Church were at all concerned in it, by Father Coughlin's own method of argument in holding all Jews accountable for the activities of some Jews the armed guard episode will be fair material. It needn't even be true, because Father Coughlin himself has established precedent for the use of unverified but sensational material.

I doubt, also that the Brooklyn Tablet, a Catholic publication, would be willing to accept in that case a condition which it laid down last week in discussing Father Couglin's latest controversy.

"HE SAID openly what millions are saying in their ordinary conversation at home and on the streets," the Tablet said.

That probably is true, but there have been times when millions of people in this country said, in their ordinary conversations at home and on the streets, many vicious and utterly false things about Catholics and Catholicism, and a time may come when they will say them again. And right now if some anti-Catholic orator were to take the air as prominently as Father Coughlin did and accuse all the Catholics of the United States of being Nazi fascists or Nazi fascist sympathizers, of plotting to deliver this country to the Pope, Mussolini or Hitler, the Brooklyn Tablet would be less tolerant of the open declaration of every canard currently on the lips of many individuals. The Tablet is not famous for its tolerance.

BY FATHER COUGHLIN'S own argument it would be fair and just to hold that Catholics exert a corrupting influence in American politics because Tammany Hall and the New York City Hall were dominated by Catholic politicians in days of atrocious corruption and because the same phenomenon has occurred in Jersey City and Kansas City—a fact which, incidentally, has been discussed by millions in their ordinary conversations at home and on the streets.

"Three Times Is True"

"It is clear enough, then, that after years of uncountered propaganda the mind forgets to reason, forgets even to doubt. Fascism has induced in Italy a state of intellectual torpor which it is terrible to contemplate. When, in a second-hand bookshop, one glances through the magazines and textbooks of the last 16 years, one has the exact sensation of raking over a muck-heap. With a stupidity and a vulgarity which our own gutter press has never yet equaled, there is combined an element of rank nonsense which could only pass muster in a nation that has been terrified out of its sense of humor.

How has this state of affairs been achieved? A complete answer would entail an investigation of Italian propaganda methods; but a briefer one is to be found in the technique of advertising, here or in America . . . Up and down the country the houses, walls and hillsides are covered with inscriptions: simple admonitions (in imitation of Mussolini's handwriting) such as Believe, Obey, Fight, plain flattery, such as the soldiers who have conquered the Empire are the bravest in the world; or, most eloquent of all, Duce, Duce, Duce. In fact it appears that, while "What I tell you three times is true" is an overstatement, the same thing, retold some 30,000 times, day in day out, has a very fair chance of being accepted.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

WHEN THE mail was opened yesterday morning, the already heaping lists of nominees for the title of "Miss Civil Service" reached such proportions as would make the judges gasp, did they only know.

MISS BADER

It is just as we suspected at the beginning: that there are scores of women in the Federal Government who are regarded by their fellow workers as the ideal of the service. And that was a swell gesture S. M. G. made in nominating his sister—who works in the Navy Department!

Only one thing can be added now: keep sending in your nominations—and send photographs of the nominees, too. If no photograph is available, The Post will see that one is made. You know the object, of course: that The Post will award a silver loving cup to the nominee chosen as the ideal feminine employe in the Government. The award will be made during National Civil Service Week, January 15-21. It will be an award for merit—not beauty.

And now we have pleasure in presenting Miss Ethel F. Bader.

TO MANY, the most interesting feature in the second annual Art and Hobby Exhibition, sponsored by the welfare association of the Civil Service Commission, is the collection of World War posters, submitted by C. C. Hathaway, of the commission's staff. Incidentally, most of the information that reaches the public from the commission passes through Mr. Hathaway's hands.

But concerning the posters, they smack of an old, bitter, tempestuous and heroic day that isn't remembered by hundreds of young workers in the commission's building where the posters are on display. But to thousands of others who see them, some rather stark recollection will come—of Liberty Loan trains and 3-minute orators whirling through the Nation . . . of streets full of uniformed men . . . of long lists of casualties in the newspapers columns. In any event, the collection of posters seems rare; Mr. Hathaway says he got them from a former employe of the Government and has twice the number displayed.

PEOPLE

The Postoffice Department has lost Thomas A. Brennan, an assistant solicitor since May, 1935, and one of the big department's most popular persons. He has gone—a little earlier than was expected—to a New York law firm which handles some of the Hearst business. Brennan got his B. A. degree at Holy Cross, his LL.B. at Fordham. He is married and has two children.

Comes word that Mrs. Mary G. Lewis, of Employees' Compensation Commission, sails this week for Europe. She will not be a stranger there, since her baggage has been heaved along in many latitudes and longitudes. In 1929 she spent Christmas on the Island of Raiatea of l'Establissments d'Oceanie Francaise, of the Tahaitian Polynesian group; and once spent Easter in Rio de janeiro, and a Thanksgiving in Juneau, Alaska. She had a civil service appointment in Washington during the World War, but resigned to enlist in the Naval Reserve, of which she was a Chief Yeoman in Boston and New York. She lives here at 1356 Parkwood place northwest.

After more than 38 years' service, Arthur C. Beach yesterday retired from his position as an associate attorney for the General Land Office, Interior Department. In his long career, he played a prominent part in the adjudication of important Federal cases involving administration of the public lands.

Born near Bay City, Mich., on December 17, 1868, Mr. Beach reaches the statutory age of retirement next month. He entered the Federal service as a clerk in the Census Office on July 11, 1900, and was transferred to the General Land Office on April 19, 1903. In the course of his service, he was at one time associate director of Field Service Division in the Land Office, a position abolished through administrative reorganization. He lives here at 4335 Thirtieth street northwest.

THE PASSAGE of the Administration's reorganization bill may depend on the willingness of the Administration to accept the Wheeler amendment requiring affirmative action by both Houses of Congress on the President's merger orders. The Senate Administration leadership in the last session defeated the amendment by the bare margin of one vote. And that margin was more than wiped out by the eight Republican Senate seats picked up in the the last election.

Miss Thompson Given Medal for Grynszpan Plea

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 30.—Dorothy Thompson, special writer for The Washington Post, will receive the medal of merit presented by Radio Guide for her broadcast on November 14 in which she voiced an appeal for the life of Herschel Grynszpan, whose murder of a German diplomat set off the wave of anti-Semitic persecution in Germany.

Radio Guide, in its forthcoming issue, pays tribute to Miss Thompson and the National Broadcasting Co. for its service in carrying the message to millions of Americans.

It refers to Miss Thompson as one of the world's leading citizens "who has once again demonstrated those remarkable qualities which make her not only the first lady of journalism but also a realistic and humane commentator."

World Parley Of Labor Urged

London, Nov. 30.—An international conference to "create a new spirit not only in the labor movement in England, but through labor for the entire world" was suggested today at a luncheon held in honor of Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman, American-born founder and leader of the Oxford Group, at the National Trades Union Club

Commenting on the luncheon, Ben Tillett, a trades union leader for 50 years, said: "This has been an epoch-making event for trades unions, and the Oxford Group and will have very far-reaching consequences for the whole labor movement."

"The cradle of British labor was a great spiritual awakenings," Dr. Buchman said in his brief address, "from which the labor movement gained its impetus."

Rotenberg Wins Speaking Contest

Simon Rotenberg defeated seven competitors last night in the Davis prize speaking contest conducted in the Hall of Nations at George Washington University.

Second prize in the ninety-first annual renewal of the contest went to Scott Kirkpatrick, and third to Phoebe Jane Beall.

The awards, oldest at the university, were established in 1847. Award for first is $15; second, $10, and third, $5. They will be conferred on class night in June.

Ford Denies Naziism In Accepting Medal

Detroit, Nov. 30 (AP).—Henry Ford said his acceptance of a decoration from the German government "does not involve any sympathy on my part for naziism."

He added that "it is my opinion that the German people, as a whole, are not in sympathy with their rulers in their anti-Jewish policies."

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The French Crisis

THOUGH ONE can easily be mistaken in discussing the French crisis at this distance, this much, at least, is plain enough.

LIPPMANN.

It has been clear to all informed observers for several months that there must be a major crisis this autumn, and that unless the French government acquired great moral authority to unite the French people in a common patriotism, the crisis would probably become a test of the parliamentary regime.

To understand how this has come about we must go back several years, at least as far back as the critical period of the great depression, which lasted from the summer of 1931 to the late winter of 1933. Until that time and during that period France was the most prosperous of the great powers, the one least affected by the world-wide depression. The reasons are complicated, but almost surely the main reason was that France was still the beneficiary of the devaluation of the currency under the Poincare regime. As compared with her neighbors and competitors, her burden of debt was low and her costs of production highly favorable.

BUT AFTER Great Britain left the gold standard, and carried with her the whole sterling bloc, and then the United States as well, the French position was radically altered. The depression which lifted elsewhere became severe in France. The wise course would have been to realign the French currency with the pound and the dollar, and the present French minister of finance strongly advocated just that. But for years M. Paul Reynaud was unable to persuade the French conservatives to follow his advice, and though a conservative himself, he was a voice crying in the wilderness.

So from 1932 to the spring of 1936 France was condemned to the grinding misery of deflation. This misery created the intense social discontent which led to the rise on the one hand of a Fascist league and on the other to the formation of the Popular Front, embracing Communists, Socialists, and the large middle class party, misleadingly named Radical Socialists, to which the present prime minister, M. Daladier, belongs.

In an atmosphere of sit-down strikes, of revolutionary and of Fascist agitation, the Popular Front won the elections of 1936, and a coalition government presided over by M. Leon Blum, a very moderate Socialist, took office. The Blum government hesitated for four months before applying the remedy which had worked in Britain, America, in Scandinavia, in Japan and throughout the sterling bloc.

IT PUT OFF a realignment of the French franc with the other currencies of the world. Instead it sought to cure the depression by applying in an intensified form that part of the New Deal program which had already failed in the United States. In effect, it applied a kind of NRA on the theory that by reducing hours and raising nominal wages, the "purchasing power" of the workers would be enhanced and the depression overcome. And, as a result, when France did readjust her currency, the benefits were neutralized. . . .

The economic crisis grew worse. Before 1936 there had been a flight of capital from French industry because of the deflation which made investment unprofitable. After 1936 the flight of capital continued because labor costs made investment unprofitable. The total result has been a withdrawal of capital and a withdrawal of labor. For several years the capitalists have hoarded their funds and labor has worked very short hours. French productivity sank disastrously because both capital and labor were refusing to produce.

Out of this diminished production, the French government has had to tax and borrow for public works, social services, pensions and armaments. Its deficit has grown to a point where virtually all savings are borrowed by the government, and the rate of interest for private enterprise is from 9 to 12 per cent.

THE PROBLEM can be solved only by inducing French capital, which is a refugee abroad, to return to France and by inducing French labor to work longer hours. This is the problem that M. Reynaud is trying to solve by the decrees of November 12. He is acting on the principle that since the capital abroad cannot be forced to return without setting up a dictatorship, it must be persuaded to return by the inducement of profit. To create that inducement he has proposed to suspend the law about working hours, treating the 40-hour week solely as a measure to calculate pay for overtime; and he has proposed taxes which are intended as additional inducements to the capitalists.

This program has been put into effect by decrees and without ratification by Parliament. The political difficulty of the program is patent. It offers inducements to capital to return to work, and it exerts compulsion upon labor to return to work. In any circumstances this would be a difficult thing to do in a democracy. To do it without the exercise of a great deal of force, the government which attempted it would have to have great moral authority, to be trusted profoundly, to be the expression of deep national feeling throughout the Nation.

BUT AFTER MUNICH the Daladier government does not have that kind of moral authority. However much the mass of the people may have rejoiced that war was avoided, the Daladier government seems to them a government of defeat and it is gravely compromised. Therefore, when it attempts to do what it is intrinsically necessary, though very difficult to do, it encounters great resistance.

A voluntary acceptance of the necessary economic reforms could be obtained only by a government which seemed to all Frenchmen the exponent of their highest national interest. It would have to be a government which inspired patriotic faith, not merely a government which was tolerated as having accepted the lesser of two evils.

It would be idle to attempt to prophesy. But certain things are reasonably clear. The Reynaud program is the only solution of the economic crisis which does not involve a virtual dictatorship that would regiment the whole French economy.

THE REYNAUD PROGRAM could be put into effect by a government which was clearly national; it probably cannot be put into effect successfully by the present government without the exercise of an amount of force which might divide rather than unite the French people.

For that reason it would seem that, even if M. Daladier has defeated the general strike, France must pass through a political reconstruction before it can take hold of its economic crisis. France will have to find a government that is thoroughly trusted or there will have to be a government which is feared and obeyed because it is overwhelmingly powerful.

The Once Over

Newspaper Blizzard

"Well, quite a snowstorm," said the news editor.

"Yes," said the reporter.

"How deep is it?" asked the news editor.

"A couple of inches," yawned the reporter.

"A blizzard!" exclaimed the news editor with gusto.

"Well, hardly that, but—" began the reporter.

"A genuine old-fashioned blizzard," declared the news editor with an air of finality. "It must have crippled everything . . . everywhere . . . thousands stranded . . . many dead . . . Go to it . . . And give me all you've got. Storm king renders city, State and Nation helpless . . . Worst traffic tie-up since 1888 . . . All that sort of thing!"

"My train got through all right," countered the reporter, knowing the news editor's penchant for bigness. "The snow melted very fast. There's very little left and . . . "

"Don't dispute me," snapped the news editor. "Has the city got its shovelers out?"

"I saw a couple of dozen."

"Make it '50,000 Men Called to Battle Drifts,'" ordered the news editor, now walking around in the manner of a man pulling his legs with difficulty out of huge snowbanks.

"How many?" asked the reporter.

"Seventy-five thousand," replied the news editor. "Here are some bulletins from around the country . . . One man injured in fall on ice at Ossining . . . Boy hurt in sled accident in Chicago . . . Two people reported with frozen fingers at Troy . . . Make it 400 storm victims."

"You think 400 will do for this edition?" countered the reporter.

"Better make it 500. Another fellow just slipped on the ice in Stafford Springs. How deep are you making the total snowfall?"

"Will a foot do?"

"Certainly not. Make it 4 feet on the level, 8 to 10 in the drifts."

"But it isn't really that deep," pleaded the reporter.

"Who's making this blizzard, you or I?" snapped the news editor.

"Your heart isn't in this blizzard," taunted the news editor. "Forget it. I'll get a good reporter, Cassidy! Oh, Cassidy!"

Cassidy came out of a sound sleep with a "Yes, boss."

"I wanna real storm story," demanded the news editor. "Know anything about this one?"

"Sure. Worst snowstorm since the big blizzard . . . Country's transportation system crippled . . . Thousands dead and injured . . . Two million workers help clean Nation's traffic arteries . . . " said Cassidy, who didn't even know it had been snowing.

"There's a reporter!" smiled the news editor. "Sit down and knock me out a blizzard yarn!"

Raskob, Dupont Owe $1,300,000, Tax Board Rules

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals decided yesterday that John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee, owes the Government $886,833, plus eight years' interest, and that Pierre S. duPont, industrialist, owes $586,369, plus interest.

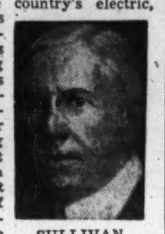
The board ratified an agreement between accountants for the two men and the Government. The agreement concerns the interpretation of a previous board decision invalidating deductions the two men sought to make in their 1929 income taxes as the result of reciprocal stock transactions, which the board said were not bona fide sales.

French Crisis Background

By Mark Sullivan

Planned Economy

IN FRANCE this week government troops, to meet the threat of a general strike, took positions guarding the country's electric, water, and gas plants. This incident deserves understandin g because of its own importance. It further calls for understanding for the light it throws on a condition that affects most of the world, including the United States.



SULLIVAN

To understand this French incident, to get from it the light it has for America, it is necessary to go back some 20 years.

There is throughout the world a controversy between two schools of thought about society and government. Its beginning goes back to 1917 in Russia. In that country a school of thought called communism arose and established itself. As soon as it felt firmly rooted in Russia it set out to establish itself in other countries. In Italy and Germany, communism did not succeed in establishing itself. Instead, there arose a counter school of thought which can be called Nazi-Fascism.

Thus began the controversy identical with the lines in any other country. In every country where the two schools of thought arise and contend, each is modified by local conditions and by the separate national traditions of each country. Yet everywhere the controversy follows the same broad pattern.

ABOUT JUNE, 1936, the controversy reached France. There was set up in France a movement called the "Popular Front." The French Popular Front was not identical with communism, not by any means. Yet, as between the two schools of thought engaged in world-wide conflict, the French Popular Front pointed in the direction of the Communist philosophy.

The French Popular Front in several respects imitated the American "planned economy." At that time, the early part of 1936, America was experiencing the period of economic prosperity that was attributed to the New Deal's planned economy. Planned economy, for the time, looked good. It was just before, on October 23, 1935, that President Roosevelt, exulting over the apparently dawning prosperity, said, "We planned it that way."

The French Popular Front followed the American steps of minimizing the idea of balancing the budget, of assuming that prosperity could be achieved by heavy government expenditures, of controlling the output of industry and agriculture, of controlling prices, of reducing working hours and raising wages. In technique the French Popular Front followed the American New Deal strategy of attack upon vested interests, "economic royalists." As the American New Deal attacked "60 families," the French Popular Front attacked "200 families," the families who controlled the Bank of France. The private control of the Bank of France was due for a wholesale overhauling. But the purpose for which the French Popular Front wanted control of the Bank of France was in large part to finance what the Popular Front was attempting.

THE FUNDAMENTAL parallel between the French Popular Front and the American New Deal lies principally in two practices—heavy government borrowing and spending, accompanied by limitation of the production of true wealth, of commodities. That pair of practices, wherever carried on, leads to but one end. The inevitable end is lowered standard of living.

The French Popular Front lasted two years. It came to an end largely for one reason—the money ran out. France, with an enormous national debt already, could not stand the cost.

When the Popular Front came to an end in France, there ensued what has happened in every country (excepting Russia) where the communistic trend of thought has attempted to establish itself. With failure of that school of thought there arose the Nazi-Fascist school. What France faces today is a rigidity of control following Nazi-Fascist lines. Today, the French workers, who were supposed to be the beneficiaries of the Popular Front, find themselves threatened by the bayonets of government and by the harsh control that accompanies the Nazi-Fascist philosophy.

IN AMERICA we could go on with planned economy for many years yet. We have the fat with which to pay the price. We have a very much smaller national debt than France and infinitely greater resources. Our experiment over a period of five years has cost us some $20,000,000,000 in increased national debt. We could go on with yet another increase of 20 billion before reaching the condition that compelled France to quit.

Apparently, however, our American experiment is going to come to an end. It seems about to end as a result of a majority of the people coming to see the fallacy of it. What now appears probable in America is that we shall drop that part of the New Deal that is fundamentally collectivist in principle, that part which is basically inconsistent with the American tradition of individualism. We shall keep that part of the New Deal that consists merely of reforms of our own system.

Rumanian Rumblings

By Barnet Nover

The End Of Codreanu

THE DEATH of Corneliu Zelea Codreanu removes from the Rumanian scene one of King Carol's most formidable opponents, while depriving the Fascist Iron Guard organization of its most fanatical leader.

Codreanu and 13 of his followers serving prison sentences for treason with him were "killed while trying to escape." At least that is what the Bucharest authorities say and perhaps that is what actually happened. But the fact that for some days the Rumanian government has been engaged in a desperate attempt to wipe out the Iron Guard, which recently renewed its campaign of terrorism, suggests the possibility that there was more to Codreanu's death than meets the eye.

CODREANU has been a thorn in the flesh of the Bucharest government for years. The son of a railroad watchman of Polish origin, he helped form the Iron Guard in 1931, modeling it very closely on the German Nazi movement, swastika, anti-Semitism and all.

Indeed, the Iron Guard's link with Germany, particularly after Hitler came into power in 1932, has been much more than ideological. There appears to be little doubt that the Nazi helped finance this and other Rumanian Fascist movements, instructed their lead- and provided them with propaganda material.

In return, the Iron Guard and related movements have taken a very strong pro-German line. Codreanu was contemptuous of Rumania's ties with the western democracies and favored a wholly German, or, at least, German-Italian orientation for his country.

THE ATTEMPT to suppress the Iron Guard began soon after the assassination of Premier Duca. The party was outlawed. Codreanu went into hiding. But soon after the group was re-formed under the name of "All For Our Country League," and continued with its efforts to transform Rumania into a dictatorship on the Nazi pattern.

To meet the menace represented by mass movement King Carol late last year appointed the late Octavian Goga to the premiership.

Goga's views were in many particulars not dissimilar to those of Codreanu. He was virulently anti-Semitic. He expressed an extreme friendliness to Germany and Italy. He favored a dictatorship, but one entirely in the King's hands. In appointing Goga, Carol was seemingly trying to fight fire with fire. But Goga's rule followed such fantastic lines that it was discredited from the outset and by February the monarch was forced to dismiss him. Since then Rumania has been ruled by royal dictatorship.

DICTATORS cannot stomach rivals, particularly those linked with foreign powers. Czecho-Slovakia's unfortunate experience with Konrad Henlein has not been lost on Carol.

Since Munich Rumania's international position has become an extremely difficult one. Czecho-Slovakia, which once was a barrier to Germany's penetration to the south and east, is now a corridor rather than a barrier, with Ruthenia the door leading into Rumania. Now that some of her prewar territories have been returned to her as a consequence of the partition of Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary's appetite has been whetted for more. Rumania happens to be the largest possessor of Magyar irredenta.

IN PURSUIT of her ambitions to dominate Rumania economically if not politically, Nazi Germany has several weapons at her disposal. She could, for instance, support the Magyar claims to Rumanian territory. Or she could foment a palace revolution in Bucharest, using for that purpose the pro-Nazi elements in Rumania.

In an effort to strengthen himself and his regime against this threatened pressure from Berlin, Carol recently betook himself to London. He was well received. But it does not appear that he brought any British credits back with him to Bucharest.

It may be that Carol will find the pressure from Berlin to bring Rumania into Germany's economic orbit too great to resist. But it is obvious that his chance of sucessful resistance is greater if this outside pressure is not reinforced by pressure from within, that is from the direction of a Nazi-inspired, Nazi-directed and Nazi-financed movement in Rumania itself.

In other words, if Rumania is to go Nazi, Carol is determined that it will do so only when he gives the word and only with himself in control of the situation.

A SOMEWHAT similar situation obtains in Hungary. There the Nazis have cleverly exploited the farmer's grievances both against the land magnates and against the commercial and industrial groups, many of them Jews. Premier Imredy has fought them with their own weapons. He has introduced a modified anti-Semitic program and has taken steds to bring about needed land reforms.

The difficulty of his plight was seen following the settlement which gave Hungary a large stretch of Czecho-Slovak territory. For this he should have been hailed as a victor; actually the Magyar Nazis damned him for not having succeeded in getting more Ruthenian territory than he did.

As a result, he was upset by an adverse vote in Parliament and only was permitted to resume his post through the intercession of the regent. Admiral Horthy, Hungary's ointment of content has a large fly in it. The Magyar kingdom ought to rejoice because at long last its revisionist demands have in part been fulfilled. But that circumstance is partially offset by the fact that Hungary today is so directly under the guns of a greatly expanded Reich.

Woodring Reports Philippine State Enjoys Prosperity

By the Associated Press.

The youthful Philippine commonwealth government, Secretary Woodring reported yesterday, is one of the world's most prosperous.

In contrast with this country's Federal deficit the Philippines enjoyed a surplus last year more than sufficient to retire all the island's outstanding bonds. Total income exceeded expenditures by $49,295,727.

The commonwealth received most of the surplus from the United States in refunds of taxes paid on cocoanut oil sold in this country.

St. Domingo Orders Fishing Sloop as Gift for Roosevelt

Palm Beach, Fla., Nov. 30 (AP).—Capt. Bill McCoy, Palm Beach apartment house owner, said today he has been asked to supervise the building of a $20,000 mahogany fishing sloop to be presented to President Roosevelt by the Dominican Republic.

The request, he said, was made by President L. Trujillo Molino of the island republic, through P. B. Pina Chevalier, commercial attache of the Dominican Republic in Washington. McCoy said he was asked to go to the island, select the finest of mahogany logs, draw plans, and direct the building of the boat.

Academy Head, 8 Others Made Rear Admirals

Commanders Raised 79 Become Captains Several From D. C.

Promotion to rear admiral of Capt. Milo F. Draemel, commandant of midshipmen at the Naval Academy, and eight other captains yesterday was approved by President Roosevelt. The Navy Department also announced the Chief Executive had sanctioned advancement of 79 commanders to the rank of captain.

Other officers selected for promotion to rear admiral were Capt. John M. Smeallie, chief of staff and aide to the commander of the Scouting Force; Capt. Robert Lee Ghormley, who is on duty in the Office of Naval Operations here; Capt. William L. Calhoun, chief of staff and aide to the commander of the Battle Force; Capt. Russell Willson, naval attache in London, England; Capt. Leigh Noyes, chief of staff and aide to the commander of Aircraft, Battle Force; Capt. William A. Glassford, jr., commander of the battleship Maryland; Capt. Arthur LeR. Bristol, jr., commander of the Naval Air Station, San Diego, Calif., and Capt. Frank J. Fletcher, assistant to the chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Capt. Smeallie was navigator of the U. S. S. Florida, attached to the British Grand Fleet, in the World War. He was on duty in the Office of Naval Operations and in the planning division of the Bureau of Navigation from 1935 until 1936, when he went to the Naval War College.

Born in Portland, Oreg., Capt. Ghormley was in command of the United States forces during the Nicaraguan campaign of 1912.

Capt. Calhoun commanded Division 1, Submarine Force, Atlantic Fleet, and the submarine base, Coco Solo, Canal Zone.

A native of St. Johnsbury, Vt., Capt. Noyes served for two years in the office of the Chief of Naval Operations before the World War and in 1916 was appointed flag secretary and fleet communications officer on the staff of the commander of the Atlantic Fleet.

For services during the World War, Capt. Glassford received the Distinguished Service Medal for his action while in command of the destroyer Shaw during and after a collision with the British ship Aquitania.

A legal tangle was created by the board's report, since Rear Admiral (ex officio) Walter B. Woodson, judge advocate general of the Navy, twice has been passed over for a permanent promotion to the rank requisite in the headship of the Navy's legal service.

Officials indicated the promotion law would compel him to retire immediately with his actual rank of captain if he ever returned to sea service.

Admiral Woodson, as the legal adviser to Secretary of the Navy Swanson, will have to decide whether the law requires his retirement at this time, officials said, adding that the question "might" be referred to Attorney General Cummings.

The selection board which reported yesterday was composed of Admiral Claude C. Bloch, Rear Admirals Walton R. Sexton, William T. Tarrant, Cyrus W. Cole, Frederick J. Horne, John D. Wainwright, Manley H. Simons, Arthur P. Fairfield and Harold R. Stark. Commander Lloyd J. Wiltse was recorder.

NLRB Member Defends Act, Assails Courts

opposition on the part of employers generally," he said he was replying to criticisms by those "whose point of view is expressed through the publicity of employers' associations, which is sympathetically reflected in much of the editorial comment of the daily press, and which is echoed by many lawyers whose clientele is found principally in the business world."

Points stressed by the board member included:

Administrative bodies, such as the board, "owe their origin to the inability of courts to deal promptly, and it is contended, efficiently and fairly with the many matters which must be decided and acted upon as government turns increasingly to new forms of regulation of private activity in the public interest." The factor of delay operates most strongly against effective relief in the field of labor relations, he held.

Opposes Splitting Board

Opposing the proposal to split the board into fact-finding and judicial divisions, he said one of the most potent reasons for an "administrative fact-finding and quasijudicial body devoting its energies to a particular law or field of law is that such a body is in a position to build up fairly quickly a coherent body of law and precedent."

Judges whose predominant concern day by day is with such matters as property benefit and property damage, he said, will necessarily "carry over into the field of labor relations something of literal-mindedness and overprecision in assessing the significance of facts brought before them."

Labor, "with good cause," has felt that courts have generally been prone to over-emphasize, particularly in strike injunction cases, "the financial damage to the employer, as contrasted with the damage done to his employes by court order restraining union activities," he said.

Board "Insulated"

He declared that though the board hires the lawyers who conduct its cases at hearings, and the examiners who preside over the hearings, the board itself is "judicially insulated from the proceedings going forward under the act until a case actually comes before it for decision." He admitted, however, that in rare instances the board does decide whether a complaint should be issued upon facts submitted.

Of all the cases brought before the regional directors, 40 per cent are either dismissed as not worthy of being pressed, or withdrawn by the plaintiff union under persuasion of the director, he asserted.

Proposed curbs on union activity were opposed on the grounds that "the cure for undesirable union activity is to give labor organizations more responsibility, not less."

Conceding that actions by labor that led to adoption of restricting legislation at the Oregon election in November were "unquestionably reprehensible" and "ill-advised," he contended "the cure will prove far worse than the disease."

Sees Democracy Aided

Pointing to the growth of organized labor from 2,500,000 in the American Federation of Labor at the start of the New Deal to the 7,000,000 in both the A. F. L. and the C. I. O., and "thousands" of new collective agreements, he declared that "these effects" of the labor act "are on the side of more democracy in our daily life."

"Personally," he concluded, "I have no doubt that the national labor relations act has performed a signal service to civilization at a time when the forces supporting democracy are in serious retreat throughout the world. It must never be forgotten that the Fascist governments of Germany and Italy came into power by crushing the labor organizations and that they perpetuate this power by the same means. Those who are alarmed at the rapidity of fascism's spread may feel a justified sense of protection and of pride in the fact that the Government of the United States has chosen to defend the organization of labor rather than to seek its defeat."

Double Role Assailed

Citing St. Louis labor racketeers with police records, Representative Anderson demanded that the Wagner labor act be changed so that no employer need meet with union officials until assured by the administrator of the act that the latter are law abiding and duly elected by workers to represent them. His amendment would stop coercion and violence, he said. He urged also elimination of those provisions of the law which prohibit the courts from reviewing the facts of evidence and judicially considering their preponderance.

Representative Ramspeck, criticizing hour provisions of the wage-hour act as "inflexible," suggested to the Associated Press it might be advisable to exempt all persons in higher wage brackets.

He recommended that the House Labor Committee review both the wage-hour and Wagner labor relations acts to see whether they might be improved.

The Georgian asserted the Labor Board "apparently has been acting as an advocate and prosecutor, and that's where the trouble arises," he declared.

Don't Let Constipation Drag On!

Do you often have days when you wake up tired—when you feel dull, sunk, "all bogged down"? It's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble!

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are that just this fact is responsible: you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines that helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, what you need is crisp crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains "bulk" plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and see if your old sparkle doesn't come back! Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

lonely road. Less than a mile from the house a truck came up from behind them and halted. One of two men in the cab asked if the girls wanted a ride?

"We told them no," Lucy sobbed to police. "We said we just had a little way to go and wanted to walk."

The truck drove on, she said, then turned and came back. It stopped beside the girls.

"They didn't say a word," Lucy said. "One jumped out and I ran to a big hole in a fence along the road. I started through this hole when I heard Mary scream. I looked back and the man had grabbed her and was dragging her to the truck."

"He threw her into the truck and drove back toward Washington. I could still hear her screaming."

Then she described how she made her way home and called for help.

She said she had not seen either of the men before and that the light delivery truck bore no lettering. The license appeared familiar to her but she did not believe it was either District or Maryland.

Mary was wearing, she said, a green coat and brown scarf, black hat, brown skirt and brown oxfords.

While police and posses pressed their search in the darkness, the Brown family sat by the telephone, hoping for a call, fearful it might bring news of disaster. Torn between rage and grief, Brown paced the floor, oppressed by his helplessness.

Trucks entering or leaving a wide area about Oxon Hill were being halted by police and possemen. In the woods others carried on an even grimmer search, handicapped by darkness and cold.

The Browns have six children, of whom Mary is next to the eldest. They moved to their 170-acre farm near Oxon Hill 15 years ago.

The farm lies in historic country and not so far way is the mansion of Sumner Welles, Undersectary of State.

After the girls left their school yesterday, they traveled by streetcar across Washington, then by bus to the end of the line at Bungalow Hollow, three miles from the Brown home.

The two youths arrested last night were captured through the alertness of a Washington policeman who noticed their black truck in the Eleventh Precinct Tuesday, when the youths endeavored to pick up a girl.

Though they did nothing to warrant their arrest, Precinct Detective Buck Berry noted their license number. He remembered it last night and turned it over at once to Maryland police.

Upon Lucy's partial identification of the youth, police redoubled their efforts to locate a third who, they feared, might be holding Mary Brown a captive.

Hippy Bailey Held As Counterfeiter

Charged with possessing and passing counterfeit money, John L. (Hippy) Bailey, 38, brother of the Tri-State gangster, Claude Bailey, who was slain fleeing Lorton Reformatory several years ago, was held to the grand jury yesterday.

Bailey pleaded not guilty yesterday when he was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Bail was set at $5,000.

Police Claim Receipt From Marshal's Office For Funds Seized in D. C. Gambling Raid

The Metropolitan Police Department has a receipt proving that $267.88 seized in a gambling raid in March, 1937, and now apparently missing, was turned over to the United States marshal's office, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, declared yesterday.

Alleged disappearance of the money was brought to the attention of a District Court jury in the trial of Phillip R. Davis, 39, and Anthony Sesso, 48, who yesterday were found guilty of maintaining a place for gaming.

After the verdict was brought in, Assistant United States Attorney William S. Tarver, who prosecuted the case, announced he had been instructed by District Attorney David A. Pine "to give all possible assistance" to accountants for the Department of Justice, who are at present investigating books of the United States marshal's office. Deputy Marshal Thomas Ott of that office is now under suspension.

Ott declared yesterday that he did "not have access to the records at the present time, but I will say that I did not handle all the sums seized in raids and I do not recall the $267 sum nor the circumstances surrounding it."

Your Figure

Although Lame, Connie Boswell Does Exercise

Rides Horseback Often Has Stationary Bicycle Refuses to Worry

By Ida Jean Kain.

SOMETIMES we don't expect enough of ourselves. And sometimes we can be shamed into doing the things we usually try to find causes for not doing . . . little but important things like exercising to keep fit and keep a trim figure. That is the reason I want to tell you about Connie Boswell.

You have heard Connie Boswell's voice on her records and over the radio and you have seen her on the screen. I saw her wheeled onto the stage of a Broadway theater and assisted to a high stool where she perched, singing as gayly and looking as lovely as any girl who can walk alone.

That made such an impression on me that I felt you would want to hear more about this young singing star who, in addition to her talent as an entertainer, has the faculty of making us pull ourselves up short for a closer look at our own lives. So I went backstage and asked Miss Boswell many things.

Crippled by a Fall

How did it happen that she is a cripple? A fall when she was a baby. How does she manage to keep such a good figure when she can't even walk without assistance? Exercise . . . And you would be surprised the amount of exercise she takes! If Miss Boswell had her way and didn't have quite a few other things to do, she would ride horseback for hours every day. As it is, she rides several times a week and usually for an hour or two at a time.

Then, she has a stationary bicycle which is carted around from New York to California and she rides that twice a day, morning and night. She has an occasional workout on a rowing machine and does bending exercises regularly for the waistline, sitting on the floor and bending over to touch her hands to her toes, then stretching her hands high overhead and bending down again.

Exercise is harder for Connie Boswell than for the average person and still she gets a kick out of it. Even if it were not so much fun, however, she would follow a definite exercise program because of her voice. A certain amount of exercise is essential to health, and good health is always essential to a lovely voice.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Revels in Analytical Discussions; Her Reticent Husband Abhors Them: How Reconcile Disparity?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married ten years, have a 6-year-old son and my husband has every virtue one could wish for in a husband. He is good, kind, considerate, generous, sober and industrious. He has a steady job of the routine variety, which affords us a comfortable living and we own three houses. But this is the problem: He can stand no mental strain whatever. He cannot stand a simple discussion in which differences of opinion are presented in a friendly way. And if the differences border on the argumentative, the result is awful.

Unfortunately, I have a very analytical mind. I love discussions, threshing out differences of opinion, and in that way coming to a more perfect understanding of the other person. My husband never differs with me unless goaded to it. He does whatever I suggest whether he wants to or not. His real wishes and desires he keeps to himself, and I have a continual guessing contest trying to figure them out. If I happen to guess wrong, that is one more thing for him to store in the dark recesses of his mind to be used against me later.

I have learned that I dare not insist on a response from him. Whenever I have insisted and tried to force him to give me an opinion he has flown to pieces. He has not seemed responsible for his actions. At times, he has even threatened to hit me, although he never has. The last time I was actually frightened. Never before had he lost control so completely. He really had a mental lapse, damaging some of the furniture. Now I am afraid to say anything to him. I weigh and examine every thought before venturing to express it, for fear there may be an explosive element in it.

My husband has always been quiet, serious minded, reticent and often morose. He is so conscientious about everything that it is painful, causing him always to be in a state of high nervous tension. I think the awful experience he had on the battle front during the World War intensified a naturally nervous disposition. I like to laugh and talk, try new things, have a spirit of adventure somewhere in my make-up that makes me want to conquer new worlds, do lots of different things and find out what points of view other people have, so as to compare them with mine. Two more different types of personality than mine and my husband's could not be imagined.

I haven't the faintest idea what the solution of my problem could be. I feel that I need the counsel of a disinterested person. You see, I want more than anything else to make a success of this marriage, for my son's sake and also for my husband's. You see, my husband really loves me and the boy. But life seems too hard for me as it is. Can you help me adjust myself to matters over which I don't seem to have any control—and so find a ray of light in this dark muddle?

WORRIED.

The Rational Solution

DEAR WORRIED: I think the real trouble here is that you talk too much. Your husband seems to be the type of person who regards silence as golden; a man who wants peace at any price when he comes home of evenings; who feels, indeed, so desperate a need for a healing margin of mental solitude after his day's work that he is almost ready to throttle you, if necessary, to get it. It appears that his nervous resistance has been strained almost to the breaking point by the insistent Niagara flow of your conversational probing and wheedling. I daresay his harried reaction to your tirelessly inquisitive onslaughts has been the equivalent of that which a caged creature might feel, after having been experimentally prodded and provoked for hours on end, day in and day out.

Since he has no taste for conversational soul searching; since he stubbornly objects to treating his own, or another's, ideas, attitudes, emotions, preferences, idiosyncrasies, traits, etc., as so many pieces of a picture-puzzle, to be frequently pulled apart and put together again; since he grimly insists on being accepted by others—and accepting them—at face value, hands off, then my advice to you is to let him alone. Your big problem is not what to do about him, but how to put a bridle on your own tireless tongue. It is distinctly the problem of removing the beam from your own eye, before addressing yourself to the mote in your husband's.

That you have been twisting the lion's tail with scant regard for inevitable consequences is told in your own words, when you say: "(he) never differs with me unless goaded to it;" and, "whenever I have insisted and tried to force him to give me an opinion, he has flown to pieces." You should long ago have stopped short of "goading" and "forcing" him into conversational reactions; and have found some other outlet for your restless mental energy and desire to dramatize yourself and your life into something uniquely significant.

The lasting and peaceful solution of your problem will be found in treating your husband as he wishes to be treated, namely, as a man who is just what he appears to be on the surface, no more and no less; who is willing to follow your lead in domestic and social matters, if you will just make the plans and let him know what they are and what you are counting on from him. I think you may dismiss the notion that his World War experiences are in any way responsible for his singular reticence. Yet supposing they are, the sensible thing to do is to ease the tension from which he suffers, by letting the sleeping dogs of his deeply buried neuroses lie.

Maybe he has come to the conclusion that the greatest safety, from a mental and nervous standpoint, is to live on the surface of things. That is a saving lesson which many essentially neurotic persons have been forced to learn; for, as one psychiatrist points out, the most intelligent use the average human being can make of his mental faculties is that of effecting a rational adjustment to his environment; and perhaps the potentially most dangerous, as well as most futile, use he can make of them is to probe the whys and wherefors of the universe and his existence therein. This applies, of course, to the rank and file of human beings, and naturally excepts the genius and scientist, who may venture with profit into uncharted fields.

M. H.

Alliance of Black and Tan

There is much to be said for alliance of strong, racy colors, especially when done as smartly as in the winter suit, above. Black on tan, or tan on black—either way it is worked a quiet sophistication of color harmony is achieved. In this winter suit version, the warm inner lined coat is boxy and chunky of cut. Rich beaver stoles flank the tuxedo revers, Snug beaver cuffs trim the square shoulders sleeves. The imported black woolen goes "soft" only in the under-chin bow and in the shoulder faggoting of the simple dress beneath the wrap. Beaver is naturally enough the material for the chubby barrel muff and pin wheel cap

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 30.

AS SOON as it was decently possible, I made a ladylike entrance into the Hotel Pierre suite occupied by that German dynamo, Leni Riefenstahl, queen of the German movies. All the rumors had long since been denied—the Hitler girl-friend business, for instance, and her castigation by that funny little Goebbels as a non-Aryan, whatever that is. Fine with me. I'm satisfied to know she's smart, a real beauty, and with zing enough for 10.

ALICE HUGHES.

So I hauled the old questions out of the sock. "The two things I have enjoyed most, so far, in New York?" repeated Leni. "First, this"—and she pointed to a large beaker of tomato juice she was inhaling. "Second, the view at night from the top of the Empire State Building." She's right enough there. That is one of the great sights of the world—and I bet millions of our own have not seen it.

This is a holiday for La Riefenstahl. She wants to tour, and she wants to climb—a passion with her—and she wants to ski at Sun Valley, our marvelous synthetic St. Moritz out in Idaho. She'll do 'em all, too. When she gets back, she plans a movie epic about the battle of the Amazons against the Greeks, who were on their way to besiege Troy. She's going to play their queen, Penthesilea—and what a queen she'll make. A beauty, I tell you. "Then I must find 1,000 beautiful women—and I must teach them to ride horses." Digging up and training the Amazon army will be little fun, I fear. But Art's Art, for a' that.

Leni looked out the window at the New York that fascinates her. "So fantastic, so modern, so well-regulated," she says. "It is possible to live a very good life in this city." Possible—but very difficult too, for many of us!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I was just going to write a small, trifling piece on the silly fashion show I saw the other day, during which each parading debutante was accompanied by a pooch suiting her costume when the terrible word reached my bent ears that Grover Twelvetrees Whalen is on the loose. Grover is a poodle belonging to Miss Florence McFeeley, of our West 51st street, in the shadow of the Rockfeller cathedrals of the center. Grover is also a Bohemian, being quite a popular artists' model. No doubt that is the way he picked up his evil habits, for the truth is that Grover is addicted to beer and when he is lost, it is really more like a bender. He has come home staggering before this from an overdose of the amber brew. Miss McFeeley has notified our gentlemanly constables of the 47th Street Station, and since the pup is a very popular neighborhood character, we all fondly hope he will be found snoozing comfortably under a nearby bar.

Irreplaceable Nerve Cells Make for Serious Ailments

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Once a nerve cell is destroyed it can never be replaced. Nerve cells are highly specialized and it is a general rule that the more highly specialized a cell is, the less likely it is to regenerate. A cell or, indeed, 1,000 cells of the skin on the back of your hand can be destroyed and the injact cells at the side of the cut or burn will multiply and fill in the gap. But destroy a group of nerve cells and the surrounding cells do not divide and replace them. They have too much work of their own to do.

There is an analogy to this in society. A thousand ditch diggers might be destroyed by a flood; the next day 1,000 others would take their places. But remove an Einstein or an H. L. Mencken and the loss is permanent.

Spells Tragedy

This fact makes diseases of the nervous system tragic and difficult. In infantile paralysis, for instance, if during the acute attack some cells in the spinal cord are destroyed, they are never replaced, and the paralysis of the muscles to which they send fibers is permanent.

Two things can happen to any cell or group of cells in the body. Their activity can be lowered or it can be raised. Both things happen to the cells of the nervous system in marked degree.

To the motor cells, lowered activity means paralysis, heightened activity tremor of the muscles or convulsions, as in epilepsy. To the sensory cells lowered activity means numbness; while heightened activity means painful sensations without cause, such as neuralgia. To the cells of the intellectual area, lowered activity means sleep or melancholia, while heightened activity means delirium or mania.

Causes Numerous

All nervous disorders can be thought of in this way. The causes which operate to produce these results are numerous. The nervous system is especially susceptible to drugs. Some depress, some excite. Morphine is used to quiet nervous activity. Alcohol, to a certain extent, excites and then depresses. These drugs apparently exert their influence directly on the nerve cell. That is why they are habit-forming. Largely why, at least. I have seen a great many articles lately discussing that great American disease, alcoholism, as if it were all a question of personality—a psychological problem. Much more than that, it is a chemical problem—the need of the nerve cell to be saturated.

Other causes of nervous disorders are infections and tumors. Infections, such as infantile paralysis just mentioned, paresis and encephalitis can be treated and brought to a successful termination, but with some loss of function due to destruction of nerve cells. Great advance has been made in the early recognition and treatment of tumors of the central nervous system.

The Gentler Sex

The Apartment Type

Sitting in the green brocaded chair in the warm, softly lighted lobby, she watched them coming and going . . . a dowager with a cane . . . a dowager with a long gray bob and a cane . . . a dowager with a Pekinese and a cane . . . a young matron with a Boston terrier in a sweater . . . a flabby, middle-aged man with a brindle bull . . . a colored maid with a toddling youngster . . . a spruce young man wearing his hat jauntily . . . a trig woman of indeterminate age striding importantly . . . a girl in chubby fur coat and knee skirt, gliding leisurely, diffusing an aroma of perfume . . . a woman and a man with the smooth, pink-faced look of beauty and barber shop . . . another hurrying woman of indeterminate age with a glazed impassive face . . . another leisurely girl diffusing perfume . . .

How alike they all were fundamentally, she thought. It did seem as if apartment life did something to people, cast them into a common mold. It used to be that you could tell instantly if a person were from town or country, city or village—now you could even spot the apartment from the home people.

Take that old lady, for instance, in the rust brocaded chair by the rubber plant. Anyone would know instantly that she didn't live there . . . that she was only a visitor. She had that tenuous, leathery look—not soft and bulbous like the dowagers in the apartment—and she was so alert, bright-eyed and spry. No cane for her! Why, she could probably go into a kitchen any Sunday and cook a dinner for 12.

Yes, apartment life did get you sooner or later. That was why she had told Tom they must get out of it. They had been here now four years—why, she herself in time might get that . . . that indefinable apartment look. What was it anyway? . . . A softness of flesh . . . yes, and a hardness of eye. A sort of slick veneer that made people seem entirely impersonal . . . as if they had no roots anywhere.

Yes, they must look for a house right away—well, anyway in March, after the worst of the cold was over. No, it was still pretty chilly in March. Well, anyway, by May they must get into a house somewhere in some suburban neighborhood, where they could dig in the earth, and see the sky as far down as the horizon, and smell things growing. Some village-like community where the people were a little more genuine and real.

Two women stopped near, sank on a couch, pulling ash stands near them, unconcernedly letting their short skirts draw up over their knees. Perfectly groomed, perfectly self-possessed, at home anywhere. Yet with eyes that never seemed to be looking at anything, faces that looked like all other faces. Persons you could never some way connect with anything real, such as carrying in vegetables from a garden, drawing water from a cistern, cooking in a hot kitchen over an old-fashioned range.

No, she never wanted to be like that. She was glad she had not let city life get her, that she was still essentially a country type at heart, anchored firmly to the ground . . . a simple, plain person . . . like the old lady by the rubber plant. She felt a sudden warmth toward the old lady, turned and, meeting her eyes, smiled.

The old lady was quick to accept the challenge. With brightening face she leaned over the arm of her chair. "It's certainly interesting to watch the people," she said. "'No, I'm just visiting here . . . my daughter went out and I got lonesome upstairs . . . No, I don't know anybody yet, but I can tell the ones that live here . . . Oh yes, I never miss . . . I can always pick 'em out . . . Yes, there's something about them—a sort of look. Now take yourself. The minute I set my eyes on you I knew you had always lived in an apartment."

Inspect 1 pound of cranberries, wash, add 2/3 cup of cold water, place in a sauce pan, boil until the skins burst. Cut 1 orange into quarters, without peeling; remove seeds and pithy centers. Cut into thin slices. Chop 1 cup of seeded raisins or cut them into small pieces. Add orange, 2/3 cup of boiling water and 3 cups of sugar to the cranberry pulp, stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Increase heat and boil rapidly, with constant stirring, for about 15 minutes or until thick. Add 1 cup of chopped nuts. Pour into hot glasses or jars. Seal jars at once and cover with melted paraffine when cold.

Rapid Boiling Is Wasteful

Rapid boiling in top stove cooking is an out-moded and wasteful procedure, say the research workers in foods. Water does not get any hotter with more vigorous boiling, it merely turns into steam.

Designers of top burners of today's gas ranges have kept pace with science, using the dual-purpose principle of two rings of heat, an arrangement which provides controlled high temperatures for quick action, as well as the many lower temperatures needed for cooking foods properly.

Ladies of the Press Bid Mrs. Cummings Adieu

Retiring Attorney General's Wife Guest at Club
Denies She'll Write Book About Capital Society
She and Husband to Be Widely Feted

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

GUESTS OF HONOR at as many farewell parties as Patti are the retiring Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, who will have very few free hours between now and the day they make their bow out of official life. Whether they will remain in Washington to accept one of the many offers that the Attorney General has had, or will return to their home in Greenwich, Conn., is one thing they haven't decided, Mrs. Cummings said yesterday at a small luncheon given for her in the dining room at the Press Building. But one thing is sure: they will be off to "a quiet spot in the South" shortly after the Attorney General has turned over office keys to his successor, and just when, and if, they will be back to Washington is not yet on the books.

This was part of the table talk at the luncheon arranged for Mrs. Cummings by a group o fnewspaper women with whom she has long been a favorite. Before the informal party was over, it developed into a kind of press conference with the guest of honor answering questions—some off the record—on plans for the future and memories of her part as a Cabinet hostess for "exactly five years and eight months."

Knowing that Mrs Cummings has been urged to write a book about member of the company asked her when she expected to take pen in hand. "I think I'll refrain from that, and avoid trouble," she replied.

IN A MORE SERIOUS vein, she said she had enjoyed being a Cabinet hostess, and had found her contacts most pleasant. "After five years, of course, you get tired of certain phases of it," she went on, and then with a twinkle added, "for that matter, you're tired of that part after three years." So all in all, she is looking forward to a life out of the limelight and frankly admits she is happy her husband decided to step out of the office he now holds. But the press women who feted her yesterday won't be surprised if the Cummingses settle into private life right here in Washington, for when someone asked the guest of honor about that point blank, she smilingly replied, "Perhaps."

Asked which Cabinet hostess could be depnded on to keep up with all the latest best sellers now that she is leaving the group, Mrs. Cummings said, in effect, that was a bit of research the press women could do on their own. It is well known that Mrs. Cummings is one of Washington's "best read" women, and that few important books have escaped her. The Attorney General's library, of course, is something that makes all visitors to Ruthven and to the Cummings home in Greenwich sit up and take notice. And in his own private collection of books are a couple, both poetry, that he has written himself. They have not yet been published, but could be, any time the Attorney General gives the word.

OVER YESTERDAY'S luncheon table it was recalled that the genial "A. G." and his witty wife were the first couple in the Cabinet to give a party for the press, and that their dinner lists for the past five years probably have included more names from newspaper circles than that of any other Cabinet household. So now that the Cummingses are leaving the Cabinet, they are receiving many invitations from men and women of the press for luncheons and dinners, large and small, as well as from flocks of official and social notables.

Those in yesterday's company included Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. Marie Manning Gasch, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Miss Ruth Jones, Miss Mary Hornaday, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Miss Mary V. Johnson, Miss Beth Campbell, Mrs. Elizabeth May Craig, Miss Winifred Mallon, Miss Ruby Black, and Mrs. Esther Van Wagner Tufty.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MR. AND MRS. Herbert Stratford, their 2-year-old son, and the family dog have all arrived for a visit with Mrs. Stratford's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wyeth. They will be here through the week-end, and will then return to their home in Chicago.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Yesterday the Stratfords were guests of honor at a small cocktail party given by Miss Helen Davis. It was the only civilized type of party of this kind, with room enough for everybody to sit down, and the guests could actually talk in normal tones and make themselves heard.

Much has been written about the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Davis on Decatur Place, and the house is truly lovely. Just about the only room which hasn't been described in print so far is the powder room, which is typical of the taste in which the whole residence is done. There are pale lavender curtains, small crystal chandeliers, and blue and white wall paper of a most attractive pattern.

Cocktails were served in the living room upstairs. Gathered to meet the guest of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Pavenstedt, the latter making the rounds again after being laid low with a cold; the Third Secretary of the French Embassy and Mme. Charles Lucet, Mme. Lucet wearing a black suit with a Persian lamb collar; Keith Officer, of the British Embassy, and Charles Ritchie of the Canadian Legation; Mrs. Donald Hiss, in a stunning wine colored suit trimmed with fur; Mr. and Mrs. George Howe, attractive Mrs. Howe in a black coat and hat trimmed with red and black plaid; Count Leone Fumasoni Biondi; Theodore Dominick, and Miss Rebecca Wellington, who was telling a harrowing story of being stuck in a snowdrift on Thanksgiving Day for four hours.

Also present were Edward Weintal, Denys Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, Mary Hammond and one or two others.

DROPPING in later on a charming hostess, who has a passion for anonymity, we found a gay cocktail party going with such success that it lasted until well past the usual party deadline—7 o'clock.

Among those present were Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, in a brown dress and smart green hat; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bradley, jr.; Miss Barbara Bradley and several other members of this large family.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Sevellon Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Barry Brown, Michael Ogden and William Harrison, two clever magazine writers; Miss Alice Barry, in a becoming black dress; Miss Marion Shouse, wearing a smart suit and black fur hat a la Cossack; Miss Mary Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mrs. Oscar Coolican, Mrs. Theodore Greene, William Blum and several others.

NO MARRIED COUPLES, only debs and their escorts, were invited to the very gay party given by Mrs. W. Calhoun Stirling yesterday for two of the current crop, Betty Fischer, and Nancy Hoskinson. Both the guests of honor and the hostess, by a coincidence, all wore black velvet frocks trimmed with Irish lace. Corsages of orchids added the glamour touch to the outfits of the two debutantes.

Dancing went on in the library of the Stirling house on Thirty-first street, while others gathered in the dining room.

SEEN HERE AND THERE: Mrs. Randolph Leigh, charming sister of the hostess; Mrs. Hillary Hoskinson and Mrs. Dulin Cromwell, mothers of the two pretty honor guests; Miss Julie Campbell, accompanied by Miss Ann Sterrett, who will be maid of honor at the wedding next month of Kitty Leas and Curtis Dall; Miss Elise Hill and Miss Betty Meyers; several other popular debs, and Miss Betty Shouse.

Morgenthaus To Fete Aides

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau will give two teas this afternoon for officials of the Treasury Department and all allied bureaus. The first tea will take place from 5 to 6, and the second will last from 6 to 7.

Receiving with the Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau will be the Undersecretary of the Treasury and Mrs. John W. Hanes, the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor and the Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Stephen B. Gibbons.

Those who will assist at the tea table include Mrs. H. J. Anslinger, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Daniel W. Bell, Mrs. Preston Delano, Mrs. Eugene S. Duffield, Mrs. Herbert E. Gaston, Mrs. George C. Haas, Mrs. A. W. Hall, Mrs. Guy T. Helvering, Mrs. Archie Lochhead, Mrs. William H. McReynolds, Mrs. James H. Moyle, Mrs. Herman Oliphant, Mrs. Thomas Parran, Mrs. C. J. Peoples, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Mrs. R. R. Waesche, Mrs. Harry D. White and Mrs. F. J. Wilson.

Generally assisting during the afternoon will be Mrs. Herman Klotz, Miss Nell Chauncey, Miss Mary E. Switzer, Miss Isabella S. Diamond and Mrs. Arthur R. Forbush.

Trudye Mae Davidson Entertains at Tea

Miss Trudye Mae Davidson entertained yesterday at a tea and cocktail party in the Tower Room at 2460 Sixteenth street. Entertainers on a special program for the event were Josephine Henderson, who sang, and Paul Reed.

Miss Irma Celestine Heard and A. Holms Baldridge will give a small dinner dance on December 15 in honor of Miss Davidson.

Miss Willett Has Proxy Hostess

Miss Lillian Willett isn't going to let the fact that she is in Paris prevent her from giving the luncheon at which she always entertains for her brother, Harrison Tyler Hathaway Willett, on his visits to Washington. She has written her mother, Mrs. E. Jean Willett, that the party must be held anyway, and has assigned Miss Ellen Knipe, who traveled abroad with her last summer, to act as her hostess by proxy.

So the luncheon will take place today at the Mayflower. Immediately afterward Mr. Willett and his wife will leave for New York to visit the latter's aunt, Mrs. Sidney Deere Smith, at the Waldorf-Astoria. They will return in a few days for another week's stay here before going back to Chicago, where they make their home.

Mme. Wankowicz To Give Series of Teas for Her Sister

Witold Wankowicz, the Polish Counselor, sailed Tuesday for his homeland on a business trip which will keep him away for about two months. Mme. Wankowicz, who remains here, however, will uphold their tradition for hospitality by giving a series of small teas for her sister, Mme. de Romer, who is now visiting her.

Mme. de Romer, who was Countess Soltan of Poland before her marriage to Anthony de Romer, is a gifted artist, and the guests at Mme. Wankowicz's parties will have the opportunity to see some of the canvases she has brought to this country.

Tea Is Given In Honor of Mrs. Arneill

Republican Fete Many Are Present National President— Looks Very Young

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

It was like "old home week" yesterday afternoon at the tea given by the League of Republican Women honoring Mrs. James R. Arneill, jr., of Denver, Colo, president of the National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs. Members who have been carrying on during the lean years of the party, those whose interest has been spurred by the results of the November elections, visiting national committeewomen and officers of the new federation were all there.

Mrs. Frank H. Mondell, who has been serving as acting president of the league since the resignation of Mme. Cantacuzene, and Mrs. Edward E. Gann, slated to take office as her successor at the December meeting, welcomed the guests with Mrs. Arneill.

Those who had expected to see a woman of middle age and graying hair as president of the newly-organized federation were surprised. Mrs. Arneill's hair is brown and she appears young enough to be president of a college sorority. But she has a record of accomplishment behind her and believes "the road ahead looks most encouraging."

Heads Federation In Colorado Also

After working as chairman of the Independent Coalition of American Women for Colorado in 1936, she became director and then president of the Colorado Federation of Women's Republican Clubs. She is one of those persons who is "never still a minute," she admits, and she always has ideas for doing things. Finding she had a good deal of time to herself, as the wife of a busy surgeon, she became interested in community projects and then in politics. She is a niece of Schuyler Merritt, former Representative from Connecticut, and comes of a family whose interest has always been along the lines of history and economics. Before her marriage she attended Bryn Mawr for two years and then the Yale School of Nursing. Her time now is occupied with her two young sons, her political activities and studying such things as typewriting and public speaking when there is a moment to spare.

Officers of the federation among the honored guests at the tea were Mrs. William E. Evans, of California, vice president; Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, of Pennsylvania, who held a proxy from the president of the Pennsylvania Council; Mrs. William H. Scott, of the District, who is secretary, and Mrs. Charles W. Lewis, of Baltimore, treasurer. The executive director of the federation, Miss Marion E. Martin, also director of women's activities for the Republican National Committee, was so busy at her office with details of the session of the advisory board which the officers were here to attend that she could not be present at the tea.

National Committee Members Attend

National committeewomen who were there included Mrs. Virginia White Speel, of the District, founder of the League of Republican Women; Mrs. Ralph A. Harris, of Kansas; Mrs. James C. Reynolds, of Sheridan, Wyo., accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Milward Simpson, of Cody, and Mrs. John E. Hillman, of Colorado, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy was in charge of the arrangements for the tea. Those who alternated at pouring were Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, Mrs. James J. Davis, Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Miss Temple Bailey, Mrs. George Madden Grimes, Mrs. Henry C. Morris and Miss Catherine Newton.

Among others who attended were Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Thad Brown, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Warren J. Haines, Mrs. Henry Albers, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. James Wentz, Mrs. Bruce Baird, Mrs. George Madden Grimes, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, Miss Mildred Reevees, Miss Grace Burton and Miss Clara McQuown.

The advisory board of the federation, at its all-day session in Republican National Headquarters yesterday, elected two additional members of the executive committee to serve with the officers. They were Miss Katherine Byrne, president of the Connecticut Council of Republican Women, and Miss Martin, the executive director. A third member wil be named later from among the presidents of clubs in States where organization is now in progress. A study program for the clubs was adopted, providing for discussion of national questions, State government and party mechanics at each meeting.

Little gingerbread men, cut from brown paper, are the covers of the invitations, which are written in verse.

Why Paddy Signaled

A thoughtless act, a simple deed
Like pebbles into water dropped
May cause a ripple that will reach
To distant shores before 'tis stopped.
—Old Mother Nature.

We seldom know how far-reaching may be the effect of some act or word of ours, for it is true that no matter how we may try, no one can live to himself alone. Things we do with no thought of others may affect others in ways and in degrees never dreamed of. It is just as true among the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, little and big. Without knowing it, they depend on one another and are influenced by one another.

The wounded young gander on the pond of Paddy the Beaver had no idea that he was effecting the lives of any others, yet he was, merely by being there. Because he couldn't fly, having been wounded by a terrible gun, he had been forced to remain behind when Honker the Goose led the flock out of the pond on their way to the sunny South. In a very short time his presence was known far and wide and the news brought certain hungry prowlers over to Paddy's pond. They knew that if that young gander hadn't left with the flock it must be because he couldn't fly, and if he couldn't fly it was more than likely that there would be a chance to catch him.

So by day and night there were prowlers around the pond of Paddy the Beaver and this was disturbing to both Paddy and Mrs. Paddy, for some of these prowlers would just as soon have a beaver dinner as a goose dinner. So with some work still to be done, the beavers must be extra watchful, all because that young gander was in their pond.

Paddy was swimming along near the shore at one end of the pond. He was on his way to join Mrs. Paddy who was on shore trimming a tree that she had recently cut a little way back from the water. As usual, Paddy was using his nose as Old Mother Nature intended it should be used. A Merry Little Breeze dancing out from the shore brought Paddy a scent that caused him to wrinkle his nose in disgust. Then he lifted his big broad tail out of water and brought it down hard. He brought it down kerslap. It made a noise like a shot from a terrible gun. At the same time he plunged under water and the sound of that plunge mingled with the water. The scent that the Merry Little Breeze had brought to Paddy was the scent of Old Man Coyote.

Now out there in the water Paddy was perfectly safe from Old Man Coyote. But on shore Mrs. Paddy wasn't safe. Paddy knew this. He knew that probably she didn't know that Old Man Coyote was so near. Had she known she would have taken to the water. So Paddy had given the danger signal by slapping the water and plunging. Mrs. Paddy had at once scrambled for the water and a moment or two later they were floating side by side watching the shore.

That is why Paddy had signaled. It had been meant for Mrs. Paddy and Mrs. Paddy only. Of course. It had perhaps saved her life. But this was not all. It had affected several others. It had come just in time to save the life of the young gander and cheat Reddy Fox of a good dinner. The young gander, badly startled, had headed out for the middle of the pond. It was just as he had floated in almost near enough for Reddy to leap on him. If that signal had been meant for the young gander it could not have been better timed.

Reddy had been so startled by that unexpected slap on the water that he had moved a little and the keen eyes of the young gander had seen him, so that as he swam away he realized how near he had come to being caught. Then and there was born a fear of the shore or what might be hidden on the shore. From now on he would be more distrustful and more alert and watchful when approaching shore. That signal of Paddy's had not only saved the young gander then but it had awakened in him a wariness that would save him many times in the future. But Paddy didn't know this. His signal had been for Mrs. Paddy only.

Mrs. H. E. Duerst Works To Adjust Children

She Is Chairman of P.-T. A. Hygiene Committee Believes Unhappy Persons Are Mentally Ill Aims at More 'Successes' in Schools

By Christine Sadler.

Working on the up-to-date theories that a person who is unhappy is mentally ill and that social maladjustments among children should be corrected as early as possible, the District Congress of Parents and Teachers this year organized a mental hygiene committee and named Mrs. Henry E. Duerst chairman.

In mapping their program, Mrs. Duerst and committee members look toward development of activities that will interest every child in the District schools and of a speakers' bureau which will make the latest "mental news" available to their parents.

"In some of the schools, programs already are well developed; but in others there is much to be done," Mrs. Duerst said. "In some of them there is nothing for the child to do. Hobby clubs, ball teams, glee clubs, nature clubs—anything that will give the boy and girl a chance to shine in the eyes of their associates and themselves—comprise the things we have in mind and will work toward."

Especially will the retiring child be kept in mind in the program, she stated, expressing her belief that action is the cure for many ills. "Even in our leisure we must be active, if we are to grow. It is not retirement from life that must be encouraged, but a more active participation in it," she said.

Mrs. Duerst takes the position that a child who does not get along socially is unhappy, feels himself inferior, and withdraws. Each person, even the smallest child, she believes, is entitled to and must have "more successes and satisfaction in the course of a day than he has disappointments and failures."

Very young children attending school today in most instances have ample opportunity for self-expression, but this does not hold true for the intermediate grades, she thinks.

"It has been estimated that one out of every 20 children now in school eventually will be an inmate in some institution for the mentally unbalanced. The percentage of those who will have nervous breakdowns is much greater. Parents and teachers have a great responsibility in this field," she said.

Mrs. Duerst is a native of Washington, the mother of a junior high school daughter, and began her parent-teacher work as a grade mother at Truesdale School when the daughter was in the third grade there.

Pigeon Flies Through Snow To Washington

Greetings to Roosevelt 70½ Hours on Wing 2 Others Expire

After a 70½ hour battle through howling northeastern blizzards which grounded planes and almost halted ground travel, the lone survivor of a 607-mile flight from Chicago to Washington visited the White House Tuesday with a message for President Roosevelt.

The messenger was probably the most unusual visitory ever received at the White House—a pigeon.

Carried in a light metal cylinder on the pigeon's leg, the message was a word of greeting, roughly typed on tissue the size of a soda cracker, from Chicago's Mayor Edward J. Kelley to the Chief Executive. Three other carrier pigeons bearing similar messages to President Roosevelt and 125 pigeons carrying greetings from Mayor Kelly to mayors of Pittsburgh and Baltimore were released simultaneously in Chicago but evidently became lost in the storm.

W. J. Firestein, secretary of the Aero Racing Pigeon Club of Washington, who bred the surviving messenger, delivered the message to Stephen Early, a Presidential secretary, at the White House yesterday.

Four pigeons were sent to Chicago from Washington to be released with the others from Pittsburgh and Baltimore last Wednesday at the inauguration of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad's stream-lined, Diesel-powered engines on the Capitol Limited. The pigeons were released at 11 a. m., Washington time, in weather that gave no indication of the blizzard that struck on Thanksgiving Day.

Firestein took a look at the snow and ice here and gave up hope he would ever see his birds again. Saturday, at 9:30 a. m., however, a tired pigeon alighted on its loft in the rear of Firestein's home in Bladensburg, Md., and tried to enter the hutch through the snow which blocked the entrance.

"I hadn't done anything about clearing up the snow on the loft, but when I saw my pigeon I went right to work. I could hardly believe my eyes," Firestein said.

The pigeon, a red-checked cock, is 3 years old and has flown 6,000 miles in races. At times the pigeon, which its owner promptly dubbed "Lone Star," has attained 60 miles an hour in its flights. Bucking head winds from Chicago, however, the average was between 9 and 10 miles an hour.

Railway Coal Rate Increase Is Extended

Continued Indefinitely On Pocahontas Lines Brings In 19 Millions

By the Associated Press.

The Nation's railroads won an indefinite extension yesterday of the temporary increases in freight rates on bituminous coal.

Granting the carriers' request "in view of the present level of railroad expenses and taxes," the Interstate Commerce Commission said the rates were "just and reasonable and will be so for the indefinite future."

Class 1 railroads have estimated the increases, which range from 3 to 15 cents per net ton, depending upon the length of the haul, will add $19,374,421 to their 1938 revenues. The increases, authorized in November, 1937, would have expired December 31.

The National Bituminous Coal Commission, the Consumers' Counsel, the National Coal Association and others opposed continuance of the higher rates. They argued that the rates had an important part in reducing coal traffic by rail.

Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman opposed continuing the increases in the case of the so-called Pocahontas lines—the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Norfolk & Western, and the Virginian. Because of heavy bituminous traffic, these three railroads have fared much better than most of the other carriers.

Pointing out that the I. C. C., in authorizing the increases originally, had found the "sole justification" for increasing the rates on the Pocahontas lines "lies in the need of the other railroads," Eastman wrote:

"We said that it 'shocks the conscience that in accomplishing this purpose their revenues should be swollen by more than $6,000,000 which they do not need and which will not be used for any betterment of the general railroad situation,' and we pointed out that by appropriate resort to the pooling and division of earnings which the (interstate commerce) act permits, such unfortunate results could be avoided. . . .

"The carriers, however, have submitted no such plan for approval. . . . All they say is that the Pocahontas lines are adverse to pooling and will have none of it."

Eastman said he agreed with the carriers that the I. C. C. lacks power to compel pooling agreements, but added that the commission could encourage by withholding approval of rate increases.

Commissioner William E. Lee concurred in Eastman's opinion.

The majority opinion contended that refusal to continue the increases to the Pocahontas lines would, as a practical matter, be tantamount to a like denial to their direct competitors, who would be forced to forego the benefit of the higher rates in order to retain business.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

MR. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.
WARM SPRINGS, GEORGIA.
DEAR PRESIDENT:

Well, sir, what with you out of town and the flag down at the White House and no excitement there, I drove over to the Tidal Basin to see if there were still any dowagers chained to the cherry trees. Shucks, the trees were all deserted as if nobody loved 'em.

F. D. R.

I promised to tell you if I got any good ideas, and standing there I got my idea-of-the-year. Why not keep a few matrons and dowagers chained to the cherry trees all the time? They say the cherry trees are a great tourist attraction.

But think how the tourists would flock in if each tree had a couple of indignant Washington dowagers attached to it, in blossom all year.

* * * *

Especially if you could persuade some real pretty ones to chain themselves . . . It all goes to show that we're certainly developing a leisure class. A girl whose grandmother was chained to a washtub now chains herself to a cherry tree.

That's real progress.

"—dowagers to draw tourists"

Of course, the matrons who are worried about moving these Japanese cherry trees say they'd stop worrying if you'd guarantee to have Harry Hopkins' WPA boys dig up the trees. Then they couldn't tell whether the boys were digging 'em up or planting 'em.

Maybe these gals like the Jap cherry trees because they don't produce any cherries; they're in no danger of being forced to bake a cherry pie.

* * * *

I'm kinda surprised the way your colleagues have been forcing this bashful boy from Texas, Congressman Dies, into the limelight. It's sorta brutal, and him so timid and retiring and nervous about Communists. Hal Ickes ought to be ashamed of himself.

It doesn't take much imagination to call Dies a zany, and it just gives him a chance to talk back.

* * * *

In fact, my dentist was saying only yesterday that the best way to help Mr. Dies back to the obscurity which misses him so much would be for you to shake these imaginary Communists off your coat tails.

You don't like these Communists any more than I do, or any more than Dies does. So why not dust 'em off in your next fireside chat and let Mr. Dies relax?

Like the Liberty Leaguers, the Communists are too slick for my taste.

Anyhow, I can't understand why Dies is nervous; I hear there are enough Ku Klux Klansmen in his district and Jack Garner's to lick all the Communists in the country. (Why, the boy may have the makings of a Supreme Court Justice!)

"—ask the King about Lady Astor"

If you have a minute alone with King George when he's visiting you at the White House, you might ask him if he's going to appoint Lady Astor as his next prime minister when Chamberlain wraps the Munich pact around him and lies down to pleasant dreams . . . You know, Lady Astor's Cliveden crowd remind me a little of the 1925 F street crowd here in Washington, the darlings.

* * * *

You might explain to the King—try to get him to concentrate on the idea—that you'd be nervous about a country run by the 1925 F St. Club . . .

It should be easy to convince him that you don't think any more highly of a Tory with an English accent than one with a New Jersey or Connecticut accent—as, of course, you don't. (But some of those British conservatives have sound liberal ideas, so my barber tells me.)

* * * *

You'd be surprised, Mr. President, how some Americans who never earned over $30 a week (and never will) are worried about Communists. You and I know it's silly to worry about Communism in this country, but what's the good of telling your wife she's silly when she thinks she hears a noise in the basement?

Maybe you oughta tell your young Mr. Corcoran to have a talk with with young Mr. Dies and try to iron this out. I suspect Dies doesn't want the Republicans passing out the Federal jobs in Texas after 1940.

Yours for more attention to the middle one-third who worry about how to take care of the lower one-third, and hoping you get some sunshine down there.

ELMER.

Capital Called Shakespeare Study Center

Rarest Works Here Better Than England 300 View Folger Books

Washington last night was hailed as the greatest center for Shakespeare scholars in the world, during ceremonies at the Folger Library celebrating publication of the first folio edition of Shakespeare's plays.

Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, of Philadelphia, who aided in gathering parts of the collection now at the Folger Library, paid tribute to Henry C. Folger and other American Shakespeare collectors for their work in giving this country a greater equipment for the study of Shakespeare than even England.

Dr. Rosenbach traced the highlights of the hunt for the rare editions which went into the Folger collection, and which he said helped make Washington a world center for Shakespeare lovers.

Books in Butcher's Cart

He recalled how he watched a suitcase full of rare Shakespeare volumes fall from a baggage truck into the tracks of an approaching train, and how he rescued the priceless collection a moment before the train swept past.

He told of completing the purchase of more than 200 early editions, and Shakespeare source books, in less than an hour, and then hauling the collection away from an English castle in a butcher's cart.

Dr. Rosenbach said the "scramble" for Shakespeare's works had been foretold in those words during Shakespeare's lifetime, and he traced this scramble through three centuries to the American "pioneers" who brought early editions to this country in a steady stream.

Ireland Book Mine

He described his discovery of the only known copy of Richard II published in 1598, and his purchase of the only copy of Troilus and Cresida whose pages had remained uncut through the centuries.

While America possesses more known early editions than any other country, Dr. Rosenbach said Ireland remains the finest "book hunting" country in the world.

Joseph Q. Adams, director of the library, presided. More than 300 persons attended the celebration, and later viewed the rare editions whose discovery Dr. Rosenbach described.

Prayer Held Best Weapon Against Hitler

'Crazy,' Says Pastor Speaks to B'nai B'rith Urges Co-operation

The Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, said last night prayer would prove a stronger weapon of defense against Hitler than tanks or gas.

Dr. Marshall called for co-operation between persons of all faiths, and declared "we must pray and rejoice in the eternal assurance that the fate of our brothers lies not in the hands of a crazy dictator but in the hands of Almighty God, whose plan for a race can neither be deflected nor defeated."

Speaking before the Argo Lodge of B'nai B'rith at the Jewish Community Center, Dr. Marshall said that in Germany, Italy and Russia youth had turned to the worship of dictators.

He said persecution of Jews in Germany had become a Christian question, because Germany had so long been regarded as a Christian nation.

Insurance Firm Sued for $1,500 by Widow of Keene

Echoes of a baffling mystery of a year and a half ago resounded in District Court yesterday with the filing of a suit for $1,500 against the New Amsterdam Casualty Co., of New York, by Mrs. Clemence Keene, of the Fairfax Hotel.

Mrs. Keene, who told the court she was "absolutely destitute," is widow of Charles F. Keene, whose murder or suicide on the Washington-Norfolk night boat in May, 1937, created a sensation here. Mrs. Keene alleged that the company had refused to pay $1,500 due her as beneficiary of an insurance policy.

She claimed that the policy covered the contingency of Keene's death by accident while traveling as a passenger on a steamboat.

On May 31, 1937, 18 days after his disappearance, Keene's body was found floating in Chesapeake Bay with a brief case tied about his neck. In the brief case were several weighty articles.

D. C. Needs New Jail, Says Bennett

Welfare Heads Meet Hear Prison Chief Crime Figures Cited Capital Rate High

Police—not prisons—deter crime in America James V. Bennett, director of the U. S. Bureau of Prisons, declared last night at the annual meeting of the District Board of Public Welfare.

"The danger of getting caught holds the American back. He is still a gambler, ready to take chances. There is always the chance the police will not arrest him, and whether the prosecuting attorney will turn up enough evidence to try him, and then whether the jury will convict him," Bennett said.

Draws Comparison

He pointed to the great number of Americans in prison in comparison to the number in jails in England and Wales, and made special reference to the statistics which reveal the "District as having more than its share of American crime."

"In the District alone since 1930 there has been a 78 per cent increase in the population at the workhouse, while the increase for the Nation as a whole during that period has been but 17 per cent," he declared.

He praised the report recently made by a penal reorganization committee and stressed that "the District of Columbia must no longer depend upon the Federal Government for rounding out its prison system."

Holds New Jail Needed

"Time was when you could look to them to take some of your prisoners. We still have something like 300 of them. But now you must stand alone. To do this, in my opinion, you need a new jail and a maximum custody unit, both of which are in the offing. Also, an adult reformatory is needed for young first offenders between the ages of 17 and 25 and an improvement must be made in the probation service," he declared.

Prisons by their very existence offer a real challenge to the social order, in the opinion of Bennett, who declared they represent "the failures of our schools, churches and communities."

"It may be," he said, "that the moral codes we are trying to enforce are so completely foreign to what we should expect that we should expect violations. Certain it is that we are conditioned to the theory of retributive justice.

Repeaters Cited

"But what is wrong when we have so many repeaters in the prison system? It is shown that practically one-half of the persons leaving a prison will return to another penal institution within a period of five years."

His speech followed the annual report of Elwood Street, director of public welfare, who showed movies illustrative of the work being done in the District penal institutions and the personnel of the agencies. An exhibit of handicraft and manufactured products for the local prisons was on display at the meeting, which was held in the auditorium of the Department of Commerce Dr. H. J. Crosson presided.

'Vital Christianity' Urged as Barrier For 'Isms' in U. S.

A "vitalized Christianity" is the greatest safeguard against the threats of "isms" in America, said Mrs. Jesse M. Bader last night at Calvary Baptist Church at the final session of the Washington School in Christian Living.

Dr. Henry S. Leiper, associate secretary of the World Council of Churches, also spoke, following discussions on the family, the city church, local relief, housing, delinquency, marriage, and international issues.

Over 400 students and teachers attended the four-day "teaching mission," conducted jointly by the Church Federation, the D. C. Sunday School Association, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

Nervous Man Robs Liquor Store of $90

A tall, thin, poorly dressed and nervous man last night thrust a revolver at George Chaparas, proprietor of a liquor store at 901 H street northwest, and made him surrender $90 from the cash register.

Chaparas, who lives at 1228 N street northwest, told police his robber was at least 6 feet tall, weighed less than 150 pounds and was about 50 years old.

Santa Claus Pays Visit to Seventh Street Christmas Lane

Among those who paraded in honor of Santa as he came to the Seventh street area embraced by the Northern Seventh Street Business Association were the Job's Daughters, No. 5, of Anacostia, shown above in trim uniform. The drum majorette is Audrey Grigspy, 13, youngest drum major in the parade. Lower is old Santa himself on his handsome float

Crowds estimated by police at 50,000 lined a gaily decorated Seventh street last night to witness the annual Christmas Lane parade sponsored by the Northern Seventh Street Business Men's Association.

A steady line of 150 floats interspersed with bands and marching troops, filed past the reviewing stand opposite the O Street Market. Prizes for the best float and the best truck were awarded by a committee of judges composed of District businessmen.

The Metropolitan Police Boys Band headed the parade, followed immediately by two companies of the 121st Engineers, District National Guard. Other bands participating were the Sons of the American Legion, Job's Daughters, Anacostia Post No. 5, Elks Columbia Lodge, and the Knights of Columbus.

A $25 prize for the best float was awarded the Rock Creek Beverage Co., while the $10 prize for best decorated business truck went to Witt's Poultry Co. National and city-wide firms as well as nearly every Seventh street firm had entries in the procession.

Judges of the event were: Fairfax Oyster, president of the Federation of Business Men's Associations; Julian C. Cardin, president of Northeast Business Men's Association and W. J. Mileham, president of the Central Business Men's Association and Henry J. Smith, president of the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association.

Dr. Overholzer Urges Courts Have Alienists

Hits 'Expert' Testimony Speaks to D. C. Bar Before Junior Section

Inclusion of psychiatric examination of law breakers within the existing legal machinery and expanded use of indeterminate sentences for offenders against society were asked yesterday by Winfred Overholzer, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, in an address before the junior section of the District Bar Association.

Emphasizing that psychiatrists would be loath to release prisoners afflicted with mental disorders, he said that "psychiatry applies to every field of law which deals with people, motives or behavior."

Dr. Overholzer condemned the present system by which "experts" are called to testify in courts. He remarked that it is easy to understand why juries and the public believe experts biased when their pay may depend on the type of testimony they give, and advocated the use of neutral experts, called to give evidence by the courts in which they appeared, rather than by either prosecuting or defense counsel.

District Medical Society Memorializes Two Members

The District Medical Society last night delayed a technical consideration of disease treatment to memorialize two members: Dr. Earl Baldwin McKinley, dean of the George Washington University School of Medicine, lost when the Hawaii clipper disappeared in the Pacific last July, and Dr. William Kennedy Butler, for many years professor of ophthalmology at the university.

In a memorial read by Dr. Walter Freeman, the society recalled the many scientific efforts of Dr. McKinley who was dean of the George Washington Medical School, and pointed out that his work "did not prevent him from taking a sincere interest in the controversial question of medical care and, with, others, he sought a solution of the problem that would be in the interest of the patient and the physician alike.

"Endowed with an enthusiastic and warm temperament and abundant physical vitality, he was able to accomplish an enormous amount of work himself, and acted as a ferment in the medical lives of his colleagues."

The society adopted a resolution describing Dr. McKinley as "an outstanding scientist and educator, a devoted friend, and a man highly respected by all who had the privilege of knowing him."

A similar resolution was adopted in tribute to Dr. Butler, who died in his Chevy Chase (Md.) home last October 17. Dr. Butler's memorial said he had a "very lovable disposition and enjoyed an enviable reputation as a physician and a gentleman."

Dr. Alexander Simon, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, spoke on "Pharmacologic Shock Therapy in the Psychoses," with a motion picture demonstration; Drs. Walter Freeman and H. D. Shapiro presented a paper on "Insulin and Metrazol Therapy in the Neuroses." "Observations on the Use of Chaulmoogra Oil in Arthritis" was the title of the paper read by Dr. Arthur Camp Stanley, discussion on which was opened by Dr. Elmer T. Ceder, of the United States Public Service, who is doing special work in arthritis at the United States Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

Late Pledges Flood Chest; Held Futile

Most in 5 Years Workers Deluged Thought Insufficient Volunteers Get 700

Leaders and workers in the Community Chest campaign experienced yesterday the heaviest post-drive flood of contributions in five years, but officials were skeptical that it was sufficient to wipe out the deficit of approximately $250,000.

From 9 a. m. yesterday until closing chest headquarters in the Willard Hotel received an unbroken deluge of contributions. Members of the auditing division were kept busy until 2 a. m. today opening envelopes of contributors. An additional 700 pledges were received through volunteer solicitors.

In addition, contributors in a steady stream brought pledges personally to headquarters. Many others phoned pledges to members of the metropolitan and group solicitation units throughout the day.

James M. Councilor, chairman of the audit division, announced that final results of the drive would be withheld until contributions had been tallied.

"Announcement of final audit results must be delayed by the unexpected volume of last-minute returns," Councilor said.

Officials declined to estimate the final figure, but were frankly doubtful the campaign goal of $2,127,000 would be reached.

As an example of the effect last-minute appeals were having on contributors, one man raised his pledge of $500 to $600, another added $100 to his $1,600 pledge, while another doubled his of $100.

Lot's Use Splits Conduit Rd. Body

Members of the Conduit Road Citizens Association last night divided in argument over removal of a vacant house at the intersection of Reservoir and Conduit roads in favor of a filling station.

A large proportion of those attending the meeting expressed disapproval of the proposal, but action was deferred when officers of the organization informed them their stand would be supported by the Federal and District governments.

The association also was informed in a report from the District street department that the city plans to cut through Weaver Terrace northwest, between Conduit road and Marlboro street. Funds for the purpose have been included in the 1940 budget, the report stated.

The Redskins Leave for New York . . . . And Look What's Waiting for Them!

A makeshift ramp was hauled up to the Benning siding yesterday and the Cinderella horse clomped into a box car. For Aneroid, it was farewell to the race tracks and off to Kentucky and the stud or what, to the thoroughbred, amounts to the fireside and slippered ease.

POVICH.

Mr. Walter Haight, Aneroid's Boswell, was reputed to have shed a tear at the Benning scene. It was a final parting between the horse and the writer who was never at a loss for a topic as long as Aneroid was campaigning. The Aneroid stories that bore the Haight by-line, if stretched end to end, would, indeed, reach from Benning to the stud farm. And if The Post's turf expert were paid space rates for his Aneroid articles he might, in fact, have surpassed the earnings of the horse itself, which leaves racing with a record of $45,500 in purses.

Aneroid, which came into racing as a $300 horse, leaves it as one of the most remarkable thoroughbreds ever to go to the post on the American turf. His stud book is filled even before he reaches the farm. Eager fanciers of horseflesh have been in a frenzy to mate their stock with the blood lines of the J. A. Manfuso stallion. But a limit of 25 breedings has been placed on Aneroid's book for the coming year.

Never Midnight

Aneroid has been, indeed, the Cinderella horse. But the clock has never struck midnight for him. Bred by the Llangollen Stable of John Hay Whitney in Virginia, Aneroid as a yearling was a semi-cripple. A growth on his right hind leg seemed evidence that he would never reach the races. At a dispersal sale of the Whitney stock he was tossed into the lot like the thirteenth bun in a baker's dozen for whatever he would bring.

But, in Washington, a chemical manufacturer was intrigued with the pedigree of the little bay colt. J. A. Manufso had never owned a horse, but he had a long-time affection for The Porter. Aneroid was by The Porter, out of the mare Outburst. He would take a chance on Aneroid. He gave to Dion Kerr, Washington trainer, $500 with which to buy the colt. There were two bids and Kerr led Aneroid back to Washington for $300.

That Manfuso had acquired some kind of a bargain was evident a few hours after the sale. A Virginia turfman who had arrived too late for the bidding, offered Kerr $1,200 for Aneroid on the spot. On the theory that if Aneroid were worth that kind of money to one man, he was worth it to another, Kerr refused the offer.

No Ball of Fire

As a 2-year-old, Aneroid was no ball of fire. By dint of rigid ministrations to his leg, the growth disappeared and he was fit for racing. But in eleven starts in 1935, the colt won only two races, only $1,600 in purses. But he had begun to look like a race horse in conformation, although he was still on the small side.

At Narragansett in 1936, Aneroid first began to attract some attention from horse folk. He won the Blackstone Valley Handicap for 3-year-olds in a bulky field of 16 that included such fancy sprinters as Fraidy Cat, Preeminent, Cycle, Liberal and Satuon. He ran the 6 furlongs in the smashing time of 1:11 1-5.

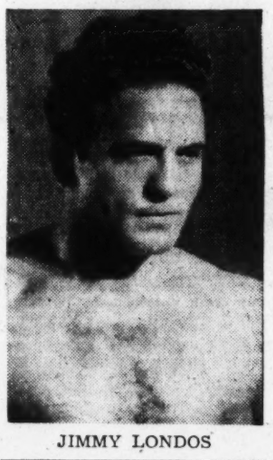
Jim Londos Puts Title On Line at Turner's

Meets Man Mountain Dean Tonight
Jules Strongbow Meets Freeman
Dean Outweighs Londos 100 Pounds

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Jim Londos, international world wrestling champion, who annexed the lesser world title recently in a match with Bronko Nagurski at Philadelphia, defends his laurels tonight against bearded Man Mountain Dean in the feature match at Turner's growl garage.

The squat, muscular Greek will spot his opponent a cool 100 pounds, but this will not be a new wrinkle in Londos' life, for he has spotted as much, and more, at various times during his career in the pretzel bending sport. Nor will defending an ordinary world championship be strange to Jeem, for there was a time when he held that title and was considered well nigh invincible.



JIMMY LONDOS

But, along came Danno O'Mahoney and a string of lesser lights, and the cultured Corinthian was just another performer on the circuit. He dogged Nagurski's rounded heels for years, trying to inveigle him into a championship match, but in vain. Bronko, it seems, always had a previous engagement.

Londos now harbors an ambition to be champion until he reaches the half-century mark—which, some hard-hearted characters would have you believe was a couple of years ago. Actually, he isn't far beyond 40, and to achieve his goal will mean many years of hard work—and possibly defeat.

Man Mountain is one of the most colorful artists in the game, and is fresh in from the Pacific Coast, where he has been making faces before Hollywood movie cameras. He also was in politics for a spell down in Georgia, where he aspired to the State Legislature. He lost his taste for lawmaking in short order, however, and decided to continue as a wrestler. Last week he won his match in 8 minutes flat, and looked good in so doing. If he repeats tonight it will be a big surprise to the fans—and Mr. Londos.

The supporting card includes the new hero, Jules Strongbow, twice unofficial victor over the Golden Terror, vs. Herbie Freeman, in the semifinal. Chief Chewaki tangles with Jim Wright; Walter Percy opposes Joe Pazendek, and Frank Brown meets up with Hank Metheny.

Johnny Gilbert's License Revoked By Md. Commission

Baltimore, Nov. 30 (AP).—The Maryland Racing Commission revoked the jockey license of Johnny Gilbert today and ruled John Sweet, a groom, off the turf at the conclusion of its investigation into the Bye Bye Will "ringer" case.

Others previously banned from Maryland tracks by the commission in the same investigation includes: Thomas Malone, trainer of the race horse Uallno which the commission alleged had been run as Bye Bye Will at Pimlico last May 7; M. R. Schwartz, owner of Bye Bye Will, and Jimmy King, the trainer.

The commission announced it would not consider an application for reinstatement from Jockey Gilbert until May 1. The commission announced Sweet's ban was made permanent because of a conviction several years ago on Federal narcotic charges.

Svendsen Will Finish Season With Packers

Kirksville, Mo., Nov. 29 (AP).—Earl (Bud) Svendsen, Kirksville Teachers football coach, has taken a leave of absence to complete the 1938 season with the Green Bay, Wis., Packers' professional team.

Svendsen plays center. The Packers are leading the Western division of the National Professional League.

Pitt End Coach Will Resign

Pittsburgh, Nov. 30 (AP).—Eddie Schultz, football end coach of the University of Pittsburgh, said today he would resign to devote full time to his law practice.

He said he had wanted to resign at the end of the 1937 season, but that Dr. John Bain Sutherland, head coach, asked him to remain.

Cox Heads Golf Group South

Wiffy Cox, Congressional Country Club professional, will head a delegation of 25 club members to Pinehurst, N. C., tonight, where they will stay for three days' golf and relaxation.

Harvey L. Cobb, chairman of the membership committee, staging the affair, has prizes for everyone and hopes to make the southward trek an annual affair. Cox will act as matchmaker and handle the tournament activities.

Cotton Bowl Bid Refused By Villanova

With 'Many Regrets' Invited by Telephone
No Reason Assigned
Team Not Defeated

By the Associated Press.

Villanova, Pa., Nov. 30.—Villanova College today declined, "with many regrets," an invitation for its undefeated football team to play Texas Tech in the Cotton Bowl game at Dallas, January 2.

After a conference with players, coaches and faculty advisers, the Rev. B. M. Albers, moderator of athletics, said the athletic board "deemed it advisable to decline with many regrets the fine invitation to participate in the Cotton Bowl game."

A college spokesman said the action probably meant Villanova, tied three times but not defeated in 20 straight games, would play no postseason games.

Father Albers said the Cotton Bowl game bid was extended over the telephone yesterday.

Villanova previously had been invited to play New Mexico, border conference champion, in the Sun Bowl at El Paso. This bid also was declined.

Ganzel Named Orlando Manager

F. M. Coffee, Washington sportsman and owner of the Orlando (Fla.) Baseball Club, last night announced the signing of John Ganzel, one-time member of the New York Highlanders, as manager for the 1939 campaign.

Ganzel, who played first base for the Highlanders when Clark Griffith managed the team, took over Orlando midway through last season and brought the club from seventh to third place. He is credited with developing Bob Overstreet, the 22-year-old right-hand pitcher purchased by Washington for deelivery next spring. Overstreet won 18 games and lost 5.

Ganzel won four pennants in six years while at Rochester in the International League, and has 11 pennants in A. A. baseball to his credit. He formerly managed Kansas City and Columbus in the American Association.

Roosevelt Center To Stage 3 Games

The second triple-header of Roosevelt Community Center Basketball League takes place tonight, starting at 7:30.

Tilson Signs New 2-Year Contract to Coach Generals

Lexington, Va., Nov. 30.—R. A. Smith, athletic director of Washington and Lee University, said tonight the contract of Warren E. "Tex" Tilson as the school's football coach had been renewed for two more years. The present contract expires next June.

He also said a committee of the Washington and Lee athletic council had been appointed to consider the "question of assistants" to Tilson, who became head coach here in 1933 after two years assistantship to Jimmy Dehart.

Smith's statement followed action of Lynchburg alumni tonight in adopting a resolution which complained that the W. & L. varsity coaching staff was "unsatisfactory and should be substantially changed." The almuni of that city said the athletic council should not "rehire" Tilson and assistants until other alumni chapters had been consulted.

The athletic director said:

"Warren E. (Tex) Tilson's contract as Washington and Lee's football coach has been renewed for a period of two years, and a committee appointed by the athletic council to study the question of assistants to Tilson; this committee will work in co-operation with him."

The assistant football coaches are Gene White and Bill Ellis.

Smith said the Washington and Lee Athletic Council always welcomed comment from alumni on the subject of athletics, but the Lynchburg action was belated in view of the steps already taken.

The Generals this year won four gridiron contests, lost four and tied one. They were co-champions of Virginia in 1937 after winning the State championship in 1936.

Redskins Arrive At Garden City

It'll Be 'Home' for Four Days
Then the Big Battle With Giants
Flaherty Starts Off With Skull Drill

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Garden City, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Far, far from the madding throngs, the Redskins moved into the seclusion of this suburban retreat tonight, here to put in the tapering off licks of their "beat the Giants" campaign.

Arriving here early tonight after leaving a scattering of well-wishers behind at Union Station this afternoon, the Redskins immediately set to work when Ray Flaherty hustled his world champions into a drawing room of the Garden City Hotel, where a lengthy blackboard session was held.

Coach Flaherty plans two similar meetings every day until the final session is held Saturday night. Outdoor workouts are to be held every morning at 10 o'clock, although there was deep concern here tonight over the prospects of finding a suitable practice field.

Practice in Mud

The football field of St. Paul's Prep School was said to be in extremely poor condition as a result of the recent snows. However, Flaherty will dig a testing cleat into the field tomorrow morning in hopes of holding the drill there as scheduled. At the same time, Flaherty is anxious to have the Redskins get the feel of a muddy ball inasmuch as Sunday's important battle with the Giants may be played under similar conditions at the Polo Grounds.

The Redskins will remain here until Sunday morning when the entire squad is scheduled to leave here by motor bus for the Polo Grounds.

George Marshall, owner of the Redskins, set a precedent of some kind or other when he came up with the squad in advance of the playing date.

In Long Workout

Before leaving Washington, the Redskins were thrust through their longest workout of the season, taking advantage of the comparatively good footing at Griffith Stadium for two and a half hours. The longwindedness of the drill, Flaherty frankly admitted, was due to the Redskins' new offensive setup which Flaherty is preparing especially for the Giants. Although the world champions have practiced their current plays for the past two months, none has been in any game to date.

On the other hand, the Giants are said to be preparing a few surprises for the Redskins, although it is pretty well established that the Maramen are sticking to the same five-man line which met disaster at the hands of the Redskins last season.

Operating upon the theory that his five-man line will stop the passing threat of Sammy Baugh, Steve Owen, the Giant coach, may be in for a rude jolt, for Baugh is now in perfect condition and may avail himself of the opportunity to run through the loose defense after faking his specialty—the forward pass. Judging from Baugh's exceptional form against the Pirates last Sunday, the Redskins, with Baugh at his best, will be at their best.

WASHINGTON has the better average in first downs, yards gained passing and total yards gained.

NEW YORK has the better average in yards rushing, forward passing, pass interceptions, yards runback of punts, least yards penalized, least fumbles, most opponents' fumbles recovered, touchdown runs, points after touchdowns, least opponents' gains, pass defense, scoring and least opponents' points.

The teams are practically even in distance of punts, touchdown passes and field goals.

Hot Shoppe Loses To Little Tavern

Little Tavern defeated Hot Shoppe in the outstanding game of Heurich Basketball League at the Heurich gymnasium last night, winning, 53 to 41.

The teams were deadlocked at half, 25 to 25.

In remaining games, W. W. Chambers defeated Trans-Lux Hour Glass, 52 to 39, and Delaware and Hudson conquered P. W. A., 46 to 32.

King Sets Pin Mark With Game of 177

Roger King, Shaeffer's Flower Shop, rolled a season's high game of 177 in the Southeast League as his team took the odd tilt from Bacas last night. In the feature, Quality Shop won two from Fair Deal, with George Honey rolling high set of 353.

Tom Smith's 406 set was the main reason that East Capital Pharmacy took two out of three from Capital Restaurant. Mike McConnell rolled a flat game of 97 for a season's mark.

East Potomac Meeting Off

The meeting of the East Potomac Golf Club members, scheduled last night at the clubhouse, was postponed until a later date. A new and stronger organization, with a tournament schedule, handicaps, and membership in the United States and District Golf Associations, is the object of the group, according to Course Manager Tommy Doerer, jr.

Rose Bowl Monopoly Is Big Ten Aim

Pacific Group Agrees
Meeting Set Today
Would End Bickering
Training Is Problem

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 30.—A possible monopoly on Rose Bowl football games—through an arrangement which would confine the event to battles between Big Ten and Pacific Coast teams—will be discussed by Western Conference athletic representatives who tomorrow will open their annual December meeting.

Pacific Coast Conference authorities have let it be known that their attitude toward the idea is favorable, and several Big Ten athletic directors see good points in such a reciprocal agreement—one similar to the annual track and field meet in which teams from the two big conferences now annually engage.

The principal drawback, as one athletic director pointed out, is that Big Ten teams have to continue practice through cold, snowy weather before playing the contest in midsummer temperatures. Noble Kizer, Purdue's athletic director, has suggested that the Rose Bowl game be advanced, possibly to an early December date.

One argument advanced for the idea is that it would eliminate much bickering which often marks selection of an Eastern or Southern opponent. Southern California will meet Duke in the bowl extravaganza, January 2, but many California fans had hoped Texas Christian would get the invitation.

The post-season game question, however, is just one of several items which may make the meeting one of the most lively in recent years. The 1942 conference gridiron schedules will be drawn and unusual activity is expected since Chicago is determined to further lighten the schedule of the hapless Maroons, winners of only one Big Ten game in three seasons.

Athletic directors and football coaches meet tomorrow, with executives of other sports slated to get together Friday and Saturday. Dr. Eddie Anderson, newly signed Iowa football coach, will be welcomed by his new colleagues. Bob Zuppke, still football coach at Illinois as the result of timely support by Illini trustees who refused to accept the resignation he gave to the athletic board, is certain to come in for many congratulatory greetings.

High School Football Nets Gratifying Financial Total

The heavy cloud of pessimism which has hung drearily over officials and close observers of high school athletics in the past few years was partly dispelled Tuesday as Eastern and Roosevelt wrote finis to this year's football schedules and made possible a complete report on finances and attendance.

As a matter of fact, some officials were highly pleased with the results of the 1938 grid season. Financially, basketball squads of the various schools will profit the most, for instead of being forced to make their own way as best they can, they open their schedules with a nice working balance. Last year it was the cagemen who accounted for most of the cash turned into high school athletic funds.

According to Leonard T. Brown, chairman of the football committee, the sum of $447.10 will be turned over to the interhigh basketball tangle which begins on January 17. This constitutes the unspent balance left after all expenses of the gridiron season were paid. Exactly $1,701.10 was taken in at the gates of the 21 interhigh games. From this, $1,254 was paid out in expenses, leaving the $447.10 balance.

The attractive cash balance might be the cause of rejoicing among cage officials, but attendance figures pleased Birch Bayh, head of the health department, most.

Total attendance, including the students who entered the gates with sudent passes as well as cash customers, was slightly over 22,000 for the 21 games—22,102, to be exact. By far the largest single turnout was for the Central-Tech game, 4,105. This game also accounted for the biggest gate, $720 in cash receipts.

Mr. Brown pointed out that the average attendance at each game was about 1,000, a sizable increase over last year. The $447 balance, however, was a 500 percent increase over 1937, when less than $90 was left after expenses were paid.

From this evident increase in interest, there was the possibility that basketball would make its way this year, too, leaving the surplus to be split up between the seven schools at the end of the school year. From what the schools say, they can use it.

Academy's Chiefs Deny His Transfer

He Expects Sea Duty
Quoted as 'Through'
Has Coached 2 Years
Favors 'Grad' System

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Nov. 30.—Lieut. Harry (Hank) Hardwick was reported tonight to have resigned as head coach of the Naval Academy football team to return to sea duty.

The office of Rear Admiral Wilson Brown, superintendent of the Academy, and officials of the Navy Athletic Association denied the statement, but from one unimpeachable source Hardwick was quoted as saying:

"Under no circumstances will I continue my connection with the coaching of the football team next season. In fact, I made up my mind to that effect before the present football season, and so informed the officials of the athletic department."

Lieut. Comdr. Campbell H. Minckler, senior aid to Admiral Brown, said Hardwick has not been ordered to sea, and that such an order "had not even come up for discussion."

McKee Says It's "a Story"

Capt. E. W. McKee, director of Naval Academy athletics, said:

"I certainly have been advised if Lieut. Hardwick had received orders for sea duty. There has been absolutely no decision reached on the 1939 coaching at the Naval Academy, and any statements concerning changes in the coaching staff are absolutely unfounded, as the Navy Athletic Association has come to no decision.

"I have seen Hardwick only once since the Army-Navy game, and then only to say, 'Hello,' as we passed. We have never discussed his resignation. If he wants to go to sea, it is his privilege, but the whole thing sounds like somebody's fabricated story. Somebody went off half cocked without trying to ascertain the true facts in the case."

Rumor Last Year

It was recalled that a similar situation arose last year after the Middies completed a mediocre season on the gridiron, culminating their campaign with a 6-0 loss to Army. Rumors at that time were that Hardwick would resign to return to sea, and it was not until February that definite announcement was made that he would continue on as coach.

Under normal circumstances a lieutenant's tour of duty at any post is limited to two years, but can be extended one year. Lieut. Tom Hamilton, who preceded Hardwick, remained for three years, during which time his teams scored two victories over Army.

Hardwick, a submarine officer, has received no orders transferring him from Annapolis to sea duty, the Navy Department reported last night. At the academy it was said he had made no request for a transfer. The position of head coach is the only permanent assignment at the academy, as all assistant coaches accept the appointments temporarily. The staff that aided Hardwick this season, including the plebe staff, already has disbanded and reported back to regular posts.

Anxious for Sea Duty

It is no secret that Hardwick has been dissatisfied with his present billet and was anxious to return to sea. Navy regulations require officers to serve two years at sea in each rank in order to qualify for the select promotion list. This was one of the reasons why Hamilton, whose services were in great demand, returned to sea. Without this experience it is impossible for an officer to qualify for advancement.

Coaching is now new to Hardwick, although his first experience at the Academy was as assistant to "Navy Bill" Ingram in 1928 and 1929. He returned in 1932, '33 and '34 to assist "Rip" Miller, who, incidentally, was one of Harwick's assistants the past two years. In 1930 Hardwick coached the submarine team to the fleet championship, and in 1935 and '36 he drilled the U. S. S. Arizona eleven.

Hardwick captained the Plebe team in 1923, and played regular end on the varsity from 1924 through 1926. He graduated from the Academy in 1927.

In his first year at the Middies' helm his team won four, lost four and tied one. The past season saw Navy chalk up four victories against three defeats and two ties.

1,700 See Second Night Of Tourney

Kekeris Is Victor Defeats Bagdassian Haynes Triumphs Wins Over Gardner

By Jack Munhall.

Billy Kekeris, walloping National Guardman, established himself as an outstanding contender for Carroll Wright's 135-pound senior class championship last night when he scored a technical knockout over Mike Bagdassian, National Boxing Club entrant, in the feature fight of the second weekly Golden Gloves boxing tournament at Turner's Arena.

While a near-capacity crowd of 1,700 fans cheered him on, the trimly built Kekeris knocked the tough Bagdassian down three times before finally winning after 2 minutes and 50 seconds of the second round had elapsed.

In the only other senior class fight scheduled, Earl Haynes, 147-pound unattached entry, was awarded a technical knockout over Charles Gardner after 2 minutes and 30 seconds of the first round. Haynes floored the outclassed Gardner twice and cut his right eye badly before Referee Harry Volkman halted the proceedings.

Four knockouts, one of the straight, stretch-'em-on-the-canvas variety, and three of the technical group marked the evening's festivities.

Pilkington Wins

In the opening bout on the program which started with the 126-pounders, Dan Pilkington, unattached, built up an early lead to outpoint Carl Barbour, also unattached. The boys were evenly matched and neither was in trouble at any time.

Next on the card was an unorthodox affair between Hilton Rudd, unattached, and Ken Swan, Merrick B. C., which Swan won with a fast finish after almost flooring his opponent in the third round. Rudd put himself into difficulty repeatedly by backing into a corner where Swan would trail him and set him up for overhand rights and short lefts.

The third 126-pound bout was a wild, free-swinging orgy in which Joe Lewis (Colmar Manor, no relation to the light heavyweight) defeated Charley Schneider, unattached, after flooring him twice in the second round. Schneider, whose strategy seemed to be a flying tackle is the best defense, took to football tactics whenever in trouble and in the second round pulled Lewis to the canvas on top of him after running into a stiff right hand.

Hord Is Kayoed

The first knockout of the evening came in the fourth bout when Bernard Daley, Fort Myer colorbearer, was awarded a technical knockout over Clint Hord, unattached, after 1 minute 15 seconds of the second round. Hord, badly outclassed, hit the canvas in the opening seconds of the bout as the hard-hitting Daley chased him around the ring, firing a continual barrage of punches which received no answer. Then in the second round he repeated the dose until Referee Ray Bowen mercifully halted the uneven match.

Billy Colbert, Washington Boys Club entrant, floored Myrle Mercilliott twice in the second round and then weathered a strong comeback by his foe to win the decision in the fourth 126-pound bout. Colbert started fast, using a nice left hand to advantage, and piled up an early lead. Mercilliott held his own in the second until Colbert found his chin with a pair of solid blows that deposited him on the canvas. The second time he fell, Mercilliott pulled Colbert down on top of him.

Elmer Ball Wins

In the concluding 162-pound fight, Elmer Ball, National Guard, won a close decision over Lowman Watts, Colmar Manor, who matched his opponent in every way but condition. Watts got off the floor in the first round to carry the battle to Ball, but weakened rapidly at the finish and barely managed to hang on.

There were there bouts in the second round of the 135-pound novice class. Tony Galifaro, Police Boy Club, No. 5, won a suspicious looking knockout over Bill Simpson, Alexandria, in the second round when Simpson apparently was tired of fighting and dropped to the deck on receiving a fairly light hand shot. Simpson feigned unconsciousness as the count was tolled, but forgot himself atnd crossed his legs as he lay there.

The second bout was a one-sided affair in which Ronald Ashen, Merrick Boys Club, clubbed out an easy verdict over Leon Dobson, unattached. Dobson hardly threw a punch, so busy was he defending himself.

Northwest All-Stars Hear Coach Conant's Advice

College Stars Aid Stewart Coaches To Clash Sunday

Latest word from the training camps of No. 4 Police Boys Club and the Northwest All-Stars, teams slated to clash Sunday in Washington's first Charity Bowl football game for the benefit of the Community Chest, indicates that neither team is leaving a stone unturned in an effort to win the first edition of the sandlot classic.

The All-Stars, being selected and groomed by Coach Larry Conant of the undefeated Cleveland Park A. C., yesterday concentrated on a tight defense under the talented tutorship of some of the District's best college players. Zuzu Stewart, former George Washington guard, gave a few pointers as did Charley Weidinger and Jim Meade, Maryland backfield aces.

One little 100-pounder, Buster Mrstik, of Leland Junior High, particularly impressed Stewart, whose former position Mrstik plays. The tiny guard fairly scintillated on both the offense and defense. There were 25 other potential stars also out for practice, causing Coach Conant to say that the team, when it finally shapes up, will give No. 4 the battle of its life.

No. 4, meanwhile, was far from idle. The 100-pound champions, winners of nine straight this season, went through a lengthy workout on their own field, giving some attention to defense but more to several new offensive maneuvers. A new spread play, the razzle-dazzle of the colleges, was perfected along with several plays from a regular line-up. End Jerry Clubb, Tackle Jim McGowan and Guard Warren Shaffer were particularly brilliant in yesterday's work. Fred Harb, a prospective halfback, also displayed enough talent to make it possible that he will beat Ray Hooper out of his regular backfield position.

The Police Mites are looking forward to the skull drill to be held tonight at their clubhouse on I street southwest. Joe Mellendeck, George town star who assisted his team to an undefeated season, will instruct the boys tonight in a few matters of offensive play which Coaches Francis Hart and Dick Hall consider important. Two linesmen from Georgetown, Joe Frank and Bill Burke, along with the Hoya line coach, "Mush" Dubofsky, will also talk to the No. 4 gridders.

Alvarez Wins Bout

Hunting

By Bill Ackerman

Local hunters have been planning for weeks, to hunt in West Virginia woods during the short three-day deer season that opens today, and which allows one buck, with one or both horns branched, to be taken. Opening of Seneca State Forest, with its most congested deer herd in the State, will add a considerable number to the list of successful hunters. Hunting on this forest is open to all, provided they secure a permit and report at the end of the day to forest headquarters with the bag of game.

ACKERMAN.

Deer may be hunted in 11 counties, 5 of which are entirely open excepting for the game refuges and game breeding areas, where "no hunting" applies equally to all game. The five entirely open are Preston, Tucker, Morgan, Hampshire and Pocahontas. In Greenbrier County deer hunting is allowed in the area east of the Greenbrier River and North of Route 60; in Monongahela, to the east and north of Cheat River only; in Grant, west of the eastern edge of Allegheny Front. Hardy is open, except for Potato Row Mountain, Big Ridge and the watershed of Howards Lick. Mineral County is open east of Pattersons Creek, and Webster, north of the Cranberry and east of State Route 15. With a real improvement noted in the West Virginia herd this year, the going should be exceptionally good.

The dry condition of the woods has been the primary reason the rabbit and quail season, which closes December 3, failed to produce better bags, with a preseason estimate of a better than usual supply of both species.

Many hunters refused to go in the woods and fields while this condition existed, for in the southern part of the State, they were credited with the starting of many of the fires that burned over an area of many thousands of acres.

It is estimated that 60 per cent of all fatal gun accidents are caused by shotguns, 37 per cent by rifles, and only 1 per cent by pistols or revolvers. About 53 per cent of such accidents are self-inflicted. About 45 per cent occur in the open fields, 25 per cent the brush and 13 per cent in dense woods—the balance in open woods, conveyances and on highways. Sixty two per cent of the number of persons killed are over 21 years of age. A fact which plainly shows the age generally accepted for the attainment of reason, isn't one that has outgrown carelessness.

The five Ann Arundel County "sportsmen" taken in by a Biological Survey field agent on opening day of the dove season in Maryland for shooting over baited fields appeared last week before Judge Chestnut in Baltimore. Two were fined $100 each and costs of $31, while the three shooting without plugs in their guns got off with the usual $10 each.

Word from Game Protector C. C. McWilliams says the largest flights of geese in years are coming in to Ocracoke Island, North Carolina, filling the beaches and reefs to overflowing. From Mattamuskeet—that wildfowl are coming in daily increasing numbers. From Curittuck, the same large flights of both ducks and geece are noted.

In North Carolina, quail hunters take to the field today, to hunt through February 15. This is a revision of the original season dates set by the commission. The rabbit season, also set back, will run the same as the quail season.

Sportsmen felt there was too much spread between the initial dates and requested the revision and were backed up by the game committee. The open seasons for other game birds and animals remain as originally set and announced.

Quail hunters, who decry the Virginia and West Virginia counties that follow the red fox purely for the sport of the chase, should not hunt in those counties, for, after all each person, or a group, and even a whole county, is the sole judge of what he or they shall term their favorite sport. And sometime look over those fox-hunting sections—the finest in the Old Dominion. The same is true of West Virginia in the 16 counties where the red fox occupies the same peculiar position of being hunted by hounds, but not killed or trapped, and because of this preferred position often draws the ire of bird hunters.

Larger than the gray fox and more valuable for the fur, it is also more cunning, faster and has more endurance. Mice, rabbits, birds, poultry, woodchucks and insects, in an almost endless string, are the diet of the red fox and when the size of the litter of pups, four to nine, which remain in the den or some natural cavity in the earth until fall, when they scatter, is considered, there is little wonder the demand on the feathered population is heavy.

Fenton T. Daffer, George P. Bergmann, Oliver M. Murphy and Theodore Raines are back from a South Carolina deer hunt with three bucks to show for their holiday. Presiding judge of the District Municipal Court, Hon. George C. Aukam, didn't make out so well on his West Virginia bear hunt last week due to the 11-inch fall of snow in the section around Brandywine.

Charles Town Inaugural Draws Field of 12 Good Sprinters

Holluschickie Goes Full Fields Named Weather Aids Plant Post Time 1:30 P. M.

Spring came to Jefferson County yesterday and with it high hopes of the Charles Town Jockey Club officials that they would have a successful meeting. With a full set of entries and a bulging substitute race, Charles Town opens its gates today for a 15-day session that will bring the close of the 1938 season in this section. With a bright sun shining there was little evidence of the heavy weather of last week-end which cold-shouldered Bowie out of the turf picture and the West Virginia Panhandle track hopes to draw a crowd of 5,000 today.

While the majority of the horses have a distinct Charles Town twang (that we like), Racing Secretary Fred Burton found a sprightly group of horses ready to vie for the Inaugural Purse, the opening feature, when he looked over the entry blanks yesterday morning. The test of 6½ furlongs drew a dozen entries and, under the change of the field limit to ten horses, all but two will face Starter Hamilton.

Major Track Horses

More than half that number were prominent in racing at Maryland's major tracks while New England has provided a real threat and the probable favorite in Holluschickie. He has raced with the best and the 116-pound topweight assignment is in keeping with his class. The Gilpin-Feltner entry of Teddy's Star and Mondoit holds a strong hand. Both have good records in uppish company. The lightweight of the field is Kai-Min, whose speed has been revealed more than once during the fall.

The colors of John A. Manfuso, Washington owner of Aneroid, will be seen on the track for the first time if Ocean Roll starts. Ocean Roll, recently claimed from Hirsch Jacobs by the Capital sportsman, is last on the list, however, and is a doubtful starters. Others that may be heard from in the feature field are Mattapony, Royal Business (a lover of the course), My Surprise, Brainchild and Bellthorn.

Track Not Frozen

While there is virtually no doubt that the Charles Town track will be anything but muddy, it was not frozen yesterday. If men and tractors can help, it will not be frozen during the meeting. But despite the mud the sport should be interesting. Charles Town has a high percentage of favorites for December meetings in spite of frequent off-conditions.

Here's some items of interest to those planning a trip to Charles Town. Post time for the first race is 1:30 p. m. The daily double is on the second and third races. Both roads to the track from Washington are open. On the Virginia side of the Potomac, the route lies through Leesburg; on the Maryland side, through Frederick and Harper's Ferry. The B. & O. special train leaves Union Station at 11:30; Silver Spring, 11:45, and Rockville, 11:56.

Due to the early sunset at this time, the daily programs will be completed before 5 o'clock, with the races being run at 20-minute intervals.

Aneroid Leaves for Kentucky Blue Grass

Having completed a fine turf career, John A. Manfuso's Aneroid, popular Washington-owned stake horse, left yesterday from the Benning track for Paris, Ky., where he will stand in the stud. The gallant son of The Porter and Outburst rose from a $300 cast-off as a yearling to one of the Nation's best handicap horses. He was pictured just before he was walked into a horse car for the long trip

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Well, we're back at the old stand for the last round up. Mountains to the right of us (but I'm going to drop that; I understand the natives don't like it). Yes, it's Charles Town, Palumbo, Famous Clayton, open fire places, Clocker Mike, Reds the Firefighter and possibly Pork Chops. Lots of action with a friendly feeling and, lest we forget, a photo finish camera. Despite all my pleadings for one track where the eye was quick enough for me, Brothers Boyle, Kaufman and the others voted in the lens and the negative. I understand the camera comes well recommended but we shall see what we shall see along these lines. But before getting too deep into Charles Town, I would like to clean up a little Bowie matter. Jockey Noboy Jacobs, everybody's friend, had 30 ham sandwiches on soft rolls ready for Saturday when word arrived that racing for the day had been postponed. Jake did a little quick thinking and remarked, "Today I have 30 rolled beef sandwiches on soft rolls, Monday I will have 30 rolled beef sandwiches on hard rolls." Can you beat that? I wonder what he will have if he waits for April 1, 1939, the next racing day at Bowie. Among the most rabid rooters at last Sunday's Redskin game was Sonny Workman, crack Washington jockey. Sonny heads for California soon. And Aneroid has gone to the stud farm. But I hope to be around when the little Aneroids begin to show up in 1941. The Manfuso-owned horse seems headed for a big career as a sire. I just completed my ballot in the Nation-wide poll to determine the best horse of the year being conducted by Friend Edgar Horn of the Turf and Sport Digest. Here's how I lined them up: Best 2-year-old colts, 1. El Chico, 2. Challedon, 3. Porter's Mite; best 2-year-old fillies, 1. Big Hurry, 2. Inscoelda, 3. Smart Crack; best 3-year-olds, 1. Stagehand, 2. Lawrin, 3. Dauber; best horses of all ages, 1. Seabiscuit, 2. War Admiral, 3. Aneroid. And I'm willing to listen to all arguments. See you on the rail today.

BILL.

First race—Beaufast may be the right one in the meetin's opener. The son of Haste has shown good early speed on occasions and the short sprint route helps. He likes the heavy going, too. Tempting Witch was a good one here last December and is dangerous. Lady Carrot might be dangerous if she runs back to Delaware form.

Second race—Dark Tyrant found that New England company too strong for his purposes. However, this is a well-bred horse and may find the cheap company to his liking. Lady Dunlin always has preferred this track when it was off. She is a threat. Doc Oster has some good racing around the Middle West.

Third race—Man at Arms has good Maryland and New York form as a recommendation in this field and also is a good mud mark. I see no reason for mistakes. Eblis has favored this course in the past and should be close. Goodwine moves up in the mud.

Fourth race—Little Wackie was something of a champion in the half-milers last summer and is reported fit and ready. This is his race track and I'm going to string along. Sun Sweep flashed good form around the main ovals and is going to be prominent here. Bright Light showed nothing in the snow at Bowie but is fit.

Fifth race—Holluschickie isn't as good as he was when he finished third to Evergold at Bowie a year ago. However, he has class, and if the old legs stand up he may take this. Mattapony couldn't get going around Maryland, but should find this track suitable for some serious efforts. Teddy's Star and Mon Doit, an entry, should be in the pay.

Sixth race—Tommy Rose turned in a good race behind Duel at Bowie and appears to have a wide edge over this kind of opposition. Needs only to flash his real form. Bargain Boy has speed enough to take the top here and should give a good account of himself. Chilly Ebbie should go well.

Seventh race—James Boy turned in a smart win at Bowie and should handle this cheaper opposition. Never Idol runs hard, honest races over this course and should be in the thick of contention. Prince Khayyam is one of the several possibilities in the field.

Eighth race (substitute)—If this race is used, I'll take Proteus, Rough Buddy and Keyed Up.

Frank's Tavern Leads In Temple Pin Loop

Frank's Tavern retained its lead in the Temple Minor League last night with a 3-to-0 triumph over the Dixie Tavern pinmen. F. Viemeyer, with a 145 game and 382 set, was high.

Senators tied Warwicks for third with a clean sweep, led by El Kilby and R. Bates, with respective 372 and 358 sets. Jimmy Guliani's triple-header strike was vain, as his team, Boveglo, lost all three to Standard Brand.

Utah Accepts Sun Bowl Bid

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 30 (AP).—It will be the University of New Mexico Lobos versus the Utah University Utes in the Sun Bowl here, January 2.

Sun Bowl officials announced today these strong Western elevens had accepted invitations to play in the annual football classic here.

The Lobos, cochampions of the Border Conference, were beaten only by Texas Tech and Texas Mines this season. The Utes lost only a nonconference tilt with Idaho.

Now a Star

In 1937, Aneroid truly blossomed as a star of the turf. The Harford Handicap, previously won by such as Billy Kelly, Exterminator and Equipoise, fell to the Manfuso colt, which outran such as Jay Jay, Whopper and Speed to Spare. At Pimlico he won the Bowie Handicap and finished third to Calumet Dick in the important Dixie, a race in which Aneroid was sadly fouled despite the failure to allow the claim on his behalf.

With those performances Aneroid was becoming something of a figure in the national turf scene. But full greatness could not yet be accorded him. He was known chiefly as a sprinter. Could he go the distance? He could. In the fashionable Suburban at Belmont he set a dazzling pace of 1:11 1-5 for 6 furlongs, then went on to win the mile and a quarter event by four lengths in 2:01 3-5.

A Great Feat

Aneroid's time that day, better than the old record of 2:02, was perhaps his most remarkable feat. Only one horse has ever been reputed to have run the mile and a quarter in better time. Whiskbroom hung up a mark of 2 minutes flat, but that time is discounted by horsemen who believe the feat impossible and put down Whiskbroom's performance as a "fabulous myth."

Aneroid was nothing if not honest. Three weeks after his victory in the Suburban, he dropped back to the 7-furlong Carter Handicap and won it handily. But a week later he reached what was, perhaps, his zenith. He ran with Seabiscuit. He ran with Seabiscuit. He ran with him at even weights, moreover, and lost only by a nose in a mile and an eighth affair in which the pair ran head and head for the last half mile.

Before he was to retire, however, Aneroid was to beat Seabiscuit. He turned that trick in the San Antonio Handicap at Santa Anita. This time, in another duel decided in a photo finish, it was Aneroid's nose that showed in front.

Undersized yearling who came off a Virginia farm three years ago with the possibility that he would never reach the races, now returns to a Kentucky farm as one of the most illustrious progeny of the famed The Porter. And as the stallion deemed most likely to perpetuate The Porter's breed.

'Dog Show Special' To Allow Canines

The Pennsylvania Railroad will run a special train on Saturday morning for dogs and dog owners. The dogs will be permitted in the coaches.

The Special will leave Washington at 7 a. m. and will arrive at the Thirtieth Street Station in Philadelphia in plenty of time for the show. It leaves again from the same station at 11:39 that night. For information call District 1424.

Five Local Colleges In Court Workouts

Hoyas, Colonials Release Shedules
C. U. Gridders in Three Sports
Ripley Faces Task at Georgetown

By Jack Munhall.

With the football season over for all, save possibly Georgetown, the local colleges are plunging into their winter sports programs without delay.

The Georgetown and George Washington basketball squads have been drilling for some weeks, and Maryland, American and Catholic universities are not far behind in their training. At Maryland and Catholic, boxing squads also are in practice, throwing phantom punches and skipping the rope.

First indication of how near at hand is the basketball season was given yesterday when Georgetown and George Washington announced 20 and 19 game schedules, respectively. Examination of their schedules provided a surprise—the Hoyas and Colonials are not booked to oppose each other, although when resumption of their athletic relations was announced it was said they would meet on the court twice this winter.

May Set Dates

Commenting on this last night, H. Gabriel Murphy, Georgetown graduate manager of athletics, explained that the schedule of each school was already filled at the time of the renewal of relations but said that he would get together this week with Max Farrington, the George Washington athletic manager to try and decide on dates. This failing, they will set definite dates for two games between the schools next season.

Even without the formidable Colonials, Georgetown faces an unusually strenuous slate. Besides games with fellow members of the fast Eastern Intercollegiate League, the Hoyas are to meet New York University, Maryland, Fordham, Army, Syracuse and Yale. Georgetown opens its season December 9 against Western Maryland at Tech High gym and also plays American, Loyola and N. Y. U. before tackling Temple in its Eastern Intercollegiate debut here on January 13.

The Hoyas will be making their first start under Elmer Ripley, who returns to the school where he first attained fame as a basketball mentor. Ripley's task of remodeling the present system, which was established by Freddie Mesmer, his predecessor, looms very difficult at this time. Gone from last year's five, which enjoyed on mediocre success, winning seven games and losing ten, are four regulars—Harry Bassin, Mike Petrosky, Ed Kurtykas and Tommy Nolan—as well as several dependable reserves.

Returning letter..en include Hank Bertrand Joe Murphy, Joe Frank and John Schmidt. Sophomore material is promising and Ripley expects a successful team.

George Washington may be minus the services of an outstanding player when it opens its basketball season with Ohio State at Columbus, Ohio, Saturday night, December 10.

Jack Butterworth, senior center and for two consecutive years an All-District selection, is suffering from a collapsed lung, which will keep him from practice for at least a week. Therefore it is doubtful if he will be able to get in condition in time for the Buckeyes.

O'Brien Lost

The absence of Butterworth would prevent Coach Bill Reinhart from starting a combination of five lettermen. Returning from last season's fine team are, in addition to Butterworth, Bob Faris, Sid Silkowitz, George Garber and Reds Auerbach. Capt. Tommy O'Brien was the only man lost, but he will be hard to replace, according to Reinhart. O'Brien was the District's leading scorer last season.

Three members of the undefeated freshman five are expected to make serious bids for regular positions on the varsity. They are Eddie Amendola, Joe Comer, a local boy, and Lou Veltri.

The feature of the Colonials' schedule is the first varsity basketball game with Maryland since the war period. This is one of eight home contests for G. W. The others are with Clemson, Citadel, Roanoke, Toledo, Western Reserve, Washington and Jefferson and Ohio University.

Among the teams to be met on the road are Colgate, Army, Washington and Lee, St. John's of Brooklyn and a return game with Toledo.

Twenty-two Catholic University football players who finished their grid chores only last Monday are already swapping their moleskins for the scantier attire of other sports.

Fourteen of the gridmen are answering the call for basketball candidates and will battle a half-dozen nonfootball men for the starting positions. The gridders are Wayne Ambrose, star of last season's five, the two Pirros, Rocco and Gus; Louis Shine, Johnny White, Vic Miller, Joe Guyon, Joe Carrig, Frank Cairo, Frank Krawczel, Paul Ryan, Hank Brostek, Hank Sant Ambrogio and Johnny Matukaitis.

Track and field have beckoned to Cairo, captain of the track team; Leo Wall, a hurdler; Pete Sachon, Johnny Carvelas, Pete Osinksi and Nick Sarelas. The last five named are discus, shot-put and javelin throwers.

Two other pigskin warriors, Joe Bunsa and Fred Stant will don the mitts, Bunsa, a 155-pounder, will be making a comeback to the ring, for he was laid off last season while he recovered from a serious operation.

District Pro Cagers Open Season Here Tonight With Jersey Reds

Notables To Attend First Game

Ceremonies Arranged Both Teams Fast Brewers Add Stars Opener Is at 8 P. M.

Streamlined by radical revisions of the rules that have added to its speed and aggressiveness, American League basketball returns to Washington after a 10-year lapse tonight.

In Heurich's compact and splendidly equipped gymnasium, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest, Washington, Heurich Brewers are to entertain Jersey's picturesque Reds at 9 o'clock.

Opening-night ceremonies in keeping with the occasion are to supplement the game itself.

A fast preliminary scheduled for 8 o'clock is to bring together PWA and Regal Clothiers in a Heurich Amateur League game. Musical interludes and several surprise features are planned and Arch McDonald, popular local sportscaster, will provide a basket-by-basket description of the game's progress over the public address system.

O'Brien to Be Present

John J. O'Brien, American League president, will be among the celebrities present and will welcome Washington back to the American League in a brief address over the public address system. Bill McCowan, famous American League baseball umpire, officially launches American League festivities by tossing out the first ball, which will be received by Pat Kennedy, ace of American Basketball League referees, who will officiate in the game.

Loaded down with established American League stars and defending American League champion, Jersey Reds loom as the severest test on Heurich's early American League schedule. Recent 39-to-36 conqueror of the league-leading Philadelphia Sphas who previously had defeated Washington, 56 to 41, in its American League debut in Philadelphia last Saturday night.

Featured among tonight's invaders will be Tommy O'Brien, last year captain and key man of George Washington University's great basketball team, who probably will be started at one of the forward positions tonight. Other visiting stars are Phil Rabin, leading the American League's individual scorers for the third consecutive year, and Moe Spahn, voted the American League's most valuable player last season.

Heurich Lineup Revised

Heurich will be starting a lineup that will feature Ed Kweller, 6-foot 6-inch center and a former star of Pittsburgh Pirates, of the National League. Otherwise Heurich's starting order will be comprised exclusively of former George Washington University stars in Micky Schonfeld and Arthur Zahn, forward, and Ben Goldfadden and George Freilicher, guards.

In a desperate effort to stop the high-scoring Rabin, the local brewers will alternate Mickey Schonfeld and George Freilicher, exceptionally fast and brainy defensive men, in covering him.

Vols Land 3 Players On Conference Team

Bowden Wyatt Chosen Unanimously Cafego and Suffridge Also Named Coaches, Writers Pick All-Stars

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Nov. 30.—The University of Tennessee, undefeated and untied champion of the Southeastern Conference, gained additional honors today by placing three of its ace performers on the 1938 all-star eleven selected for the Associated Press by coaches and sports writers.

To the surprise of most observers of the game, Tennessee stepped out with a streamlined football club to emerge victorious over nine straight foes and the team's "key" player was its captain, Bowden Wyatt, a sterling end who received the only unanimous vote in the balloting.

Joining the tall, handsome Wyatt on the honor roll were his helpful companions, George (Bad News) Cafego, a flashy junior halfback, and Robert Suffridge, former Golden Gloves champion and a sophomore guard whose great performances labeled him as one of the Nation's best linemen of the year.

8 Teams Represented

Eight teams are represented on the all-star line-up, selected after wide balloting from every section of the conference. Eddie Gatto, of Louisiana State University, a husky tackle who was consistent in the line all season, repeated from the 1937 honor roll.

The voting for a guard mate for Suffridge and the team's center was extremely close. James L. (Shorty) Brooks, a 5-foot 7-inch lineman of Georgia Tech, won the guard berth with only a few votes to spare over Milton Howell, of Auburn, and J. W. Goree, a standout Louisiana State sophomore. Quinton Lumpkin, Georgia's captain, gained the center spot in a close vote battle with Jack Chivington, of Georgia Tech, and Sherman Hinkebein, of Kentucky.

No less than a dozen ballots nominated the final backfield selection of Cafego at quarterback, Parker Hall, Mississippi's great all-around backfield star; Warren (Broncho) Brunner, of Tulane, and Charlie Holm, of Alabama. Others to receive many votes were Vic Bradford, Alabama quarterback; Spec Kelly, Auburn's ace runner, and Bert Marshall, Vanderbilt's ace performer.

End Without Weakness

Wyatt, hardly knocked off his feet this season and described by his coach, Maj. Bob Neyland, as "an end without a weakness," found the voting giving him Ken Kavanaugh, tall Louisiana State end, named as a running mate on a team that could easily be classed as one of the most versatile ever to represent the all-star selection.

The first choice for a tackle position was Torrance (Bo) Russell, Auburn's 202-pound captain, who competed in more than 500 minutes of action and excelled throughout the campaign in performances at either side of the line. He showed finesse at rushing passers and checking the strides of interference.

Louisiana State coaches rated Kavanaugh as a better offensive end than Gaynell Tinsley, twice selected All-America. He lacked some of the polish on defense that Tinsley displayed, but was rated considerably higher on offensive play. Coach Bernie Moore regards him as a "pass completer" rather than a receiver. He made many fine catches and ranked well up in scoring, as did Wyatt.

Several coaches gave their ballot to Brooks as guard, pointing out that he was superb on broken-field tackling, fast down the field on covering punts and adept at pulling out quickly to lead the interference. Suffridge, a standout in every game he played, was one of the chief reasons for Tennessee's successful year. He was seldom out of a play and amazed with the quickness with which he broke through to nail ball carriers.

Cafego ran Tennessee's ball team when he was in the line-up. He did not score a lot, but was responsible for many touchdowns by his fine runs and accurate passes and his punting helped no little. Hall performed in a stellar role against every opponent. His bullet passes produced most of Mississippi's points.

Locals Protest 3 of Winners Points Schonfeld High Scorer of N. Y. Tilt

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Playing the game under protest after Kingston Colonials had gained a 20-to-18 leadership at the termination of second period play, Washington Heurich Brewers lost a 31-to-26 verdict to Kingston in an American Basketball League game before 3,000 people here tonight.

The protest was registered by Bob McDonald, general manager of Heurich's, who claimed that Kingston scored three of its points in second period play ten seconds after the Kingston time-keeper had blown his whistle to end the period. The protest will be officially lodged with John J. O'Brien, American League president, in Washington, D. C., tomorrow night.

The Heurich Brewers assumed a 13-to-9 leadership at the end of first period play and were leading Kingston right down to the fading seconds of the second period when Kingston launched a rally that aroused McDonald's protest. Kingston fought off the Washingtonians to remain ahead in the final period.

Ravenel Named Head Coach Of Basketball at Episcopal

Former Duke Star Succeeds Fraley J. B. 'Red' Massie to Be Assistant

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Nov. 30.—W. B. "Billy" Ravenel, former star cager at Duke University, has been appointed head basketball coach at Episcopal High School, it was announced today by Maroon athletic officials. He succeeds Walter Fraley, of Davidson College, who resigned at Episcopal last year to take over the head football coaching post at Christchurch Prep.

Ravenel will be assisted by J. B. (Red) Massie, formerly of Hampden-Sydney College, who came to Episcopal this year to serve as assistant coach to the varsity football squad.

Episcopal's new head coach has had several years' experience not only as a player but as a mentor, having tutored the Maroon "B" team last season, as well as supervising the activities of the intra-school league.

Ravenel and Massie will be forced to rebuild the Episcopal team, seven of last year's ten lettermen having graduated in June. Lettermen Red Bradfield, Douglas Bradley and Norman Farquhar will comprise the nucleus for the squad, while a number of promising prospects up from the "B" squad are expected to round out the team. Among the more promising of the junior crop are Kabler, Robertson, Thomas, J Davis and Charlie Barrett.

Episcopal's schedule is now in the making, and will be announced by Atheletic Director Bick Cardwell within the next ten days. The Maroons will play about 15 games, including 8 against Old Dominion Prep rivals.

Episcopal finished as runner-up for the title last year, losing to St. Christopher's, of Richmond, in the deciding game.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Facts and Fancies About Diva in 'Great Waltz'
Group Theater Holds a Convention
A Few Nuggets Sluiced From the Theater

SINCE "The Great Waltz," the picture in which she makes her American debut, begins its second week at Loew's Palace Theater today, it may be all right to go back and dig but a bulletin mailed this department many months ago by Howard Strickling, of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, with a view to stimulating interest in Miliza Korjus far in advance of her first screen appearance. Its contents may prove even more interesting now than they would have 'way back yonder, when nobody but Mr. Strickling knew.

BELL

Imported to Hollywood after producers had listened to her spectacular coloratura trilling forth from phonograph records, Mme. Korjus, like Nelson Eddy, waited two years for the right vehicle for her manifold talents, which include statuesque blonde beauty, decided ability as an actress and a provocative camera personality, in addition to her voice. She had to master English and the complicated methods of Hollywood in formulating the world's pre-eminent celluloid entertainment. She haunted the M.-G.-M. studios, learning how sound was recorded, watching the technique of picture-making, delving into secrets of makeup, costuming and the other abstruse ramifications of the cinema. One day she would be in the cutting-room, watching the film editors; another would find her out with the camera crews, and so on. All of this accumulated knowledge has been put to good account in "The Great Waltz."

She sings Oscar Hammerstein 2d lyrics to "Tales of the Vienna Woods;" sings the prima donna role in "Die Fliedermaus," with a 90-piece orchestra and Toscha Seidel, concert violinist, playing her obligato. She can sing in the normal soprano register and then go soaring away into the range between high "C" and "C" in altissimo in the same breath. Her singing is absolutely effortless and her voice never tires. Her volume of tone is remarkable for a voice so high and pure. Like Tetrazzini, she "makes a fool of the flute."

Tall, blonde, with sky-blue eyes and a delicate pink complexion, she is a joy to the cameramen, as well as to the sound recorders. Her musical education has been fairly complete. Born in Warsaw, Poland, Mme. Korjus studied in the conservatory in Moscow, in Kiev, Warsaw, Ravel, Berlin, Lucerne and Amsterdam. She started her operatic career under the great Max Schilling, continental impresario, and has triumphed in many European cities. In Europe she also made some phonograph recordings. A talent scout sent the records to the M.-G.-M. executives, who listened, marveled and cabled her a contract.

So there she is, thrilling audiences in "The Great Waltz."

Mr. Strickling's eloquent panegyric is not all so factual as that, one who himself was once a press agent is constrained to suspect. For instance, he introduces his laudatory remarks in these words: "She eats 12 raw eggs daily to preserve her voice; she never reads a newspaper and hasn't the slightest idea what is going on in the world; she studies the lives of great composers and is almost a walking encyclopedia on the subject; aside from her music, her home is her only interest." Well, maybe. But 12 raw eggs a day for 30 days, it seems to me, would be a much tougher order than that proverbial quail-on-toast for the same period. She loves chocolates, but eats the eggs instead—iron will, or something. Toscha Seidel calls her "the human Stradivarius." She lives in the hills overlooking Beverly, drives her own car, loves to swim, plays tennis well. Refraining from worry, she believes, keeps one efficient as an artiste. A good trick, even if you can't do it. She is young—still in her twenties. And her name is pronounced "Mil-it-za Kor-e-yus," although she won't pin your ears back if you happen to mispronounce it "Gorgeous."

Anyone dropping into the Variety Club, in the Willard Hotel, Tuesday night shortly before midnight, would have found something more than the nucleus of the Group Theater in conference at the largest table in the place, probably discussing their forthcoming production of Irwin Shaw's new play of "Gentle People." Most of the cast of "Golden Boy," current at the National, were there, plus other members of the new cast who had just arrived in town, Sylvia Sidney and Luther Adler, whom she recently married in London, among them.

Almost any minute, hour or day now, Franchot Tone will be dropping in from Hollywood to join the confab. Frances Farmer and Elia Kazan, not to mention Roman Bohnen and the others in "Golden Boy," you would recognize immediately. In the case of Miss Sidney, you might not have so much luck. Taller and darker than the cameras make her appear on the screen, Miss Sidney wears an eye-concealing winged hat—with the wings, or bows, or whatever they are, clear down to here in front—and tortoise shell glasses. You have to look at least three or four times to be sure.

Anyhow, there is a new play in the making and the Varieteers seemed as excited about it as the Groupers. The Barbers Union might have been more excited about it than either of them! But art evidently is not tonsorial.

Speaking of the Variety Club, a double-header, so to speak, is planned by the members for next Monday. At 1 p. m., in the small ballroom of the Willard, a testimonial luncheon will be tendered A. Julian Brylawski, retiring chief barker of the club, with John J. Payette, Warner Brothers zone manager in the Washington territory, and Carter Barron, Eastern division manager of Loew's, Inc., as "kings for the day" on behalf of the entire board of governors. That night, at 8 o'clock, in the Willard's main ballroom, the barkerettes of Variety will give a bingo party, proceeds of which will be devoted to the club's welfare fund, now dedicated to the purchase and installation of incubator units at Sibley Hospital to reduce the mortality rate among prematurely born babies. Admission to the bingo party will be free.

Under date of November 28, 1938, an irate correspondent, who hazards only the typewritten signature of "A Slovak," bludgeons this desk, in part as follows: "On your review of 'Janosik,' I wish to inform you that it is a Slovak film. The language spoken is Slovak. All the characters are Slovaks. There is nothing Czech about the picture. And it is not a 'Bohemian' legend. It is Slovakian. I think it should be known that there are Slovaks in existence, as there are Czechs."

"Janosik," of course, no longer is on view, but this department, nevertheless, regrets that it accepted the producing company's film and printed declarations that it was a Czecho-Slovakian production, based on an old Bohemian legend. They evidently didn't know, either.

The Washington Civic Theater, up to its ears in rehearsals of Maxwell Anderson's comedy of "High-Tor," pauses to announce that a special preview performance of the play will be given in Wardman Park Theater on Monday night, December 12, for the benefit of the Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. The regular engagement for the public will begin the following evening, Tuesday, December 13, and continue through the following Saturday night. "High Tor" will be the second on the Civic's list of seven subscription plays this season. It has not before been seen in Washington.

The opening performance of the Labor Stage production of "Pins and Needles," at the National Theater next Monday night, while we are on the subject, will be sponsored by the National Women's Trade Union League as a benefit for its educational work throughout the country. Many local organizations, including numerous branches of the Department of Labor, already have purchased large blocks of seats for Monday night's benefit. It is high time to hurry, before the last seat in the house is gone.

We regret more than ever that a press of official duties last Monday prevented our participation in the junket that trekked to Baltimore to meet Richard Carlson, cast in the role of Duncan MacRae in the Selznick picturization of I. A. R. Wylie's story of "The Young in Heart," concerning which something appeared here yesterday. Mr. Carlson, last seen in Washington with Ethel Barrymore in "Whiteoaks," is a talented, triple-threat man in the theater. With considerable stage experience behind him, he now is under contract to the West Coast as actor, writer and director, with a clause in the parchment stipulating that he is to be free from studio obligations for six months each year, if he chooses, to devote his time to stage work. Although I muffed the opportunity to meet him, I am grateful to Mr. Carlson for a handsomely inscribed photograph of himself and a copy of the Wylie book, with this written on the fly-leaf: "Here's hoping you think kindly of 'Duncan McRae.'" I already do—and so will you when you see him on the screen.

Personal aside to the Earl of Allvine, Fox Movietone News, vice Tony Muto, globe-trotting: That fine old custom of masculine unhatting in the presence of the unfair sex in elevators is predicated on the high sense of chivalry of the Washington male animal and his concern over the welfare of the members of the medical fraternity who like to treat head colds. So now you know. And thanks for the note.

Will Charm for a Second Week

MILIZA KORJUS

A new portrait study of the brilliant coloratura, whose voice will be heard for a second week beginning today, in the lilting Strauss melodies that comprise the score of "The Great Waltz," at Loew's Palace Theater. Luise Rainer and Fernand Gravet are costarred with Korjus in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 29.—The Standard Oil Co. may have started something in Hollywood. Instead of paying Irving Caesar for his safety songs which are now being sung in every public school in the land, they bought him an annuity which pays him an income until the day he dies. That's so smart that Hollywood producers and stars are thinking of adopting it.

HEDDA HOPPER

I ran into Harry Carey at Metro where he's playing in "Burn 'Em Up O'Connor" and he was reading and chuckling over his yearly holiday letter from an English trader he met in Africa while making "Trader Horn." The note told him that Matia, one of the native boys brought back here for that picture, who had lived for months in a tent on the Metro lot and saved all his pennies, arrived back in the Belgian Congo with enough money to buy a trading post and four wives! The other boy, Riano, went home broke. He's been guiding for hunting parties and waiting for another break—hoping for a picture company which will bring him back to Hollywood for more of that gold.

When you have that low down-and-outie feeling go to the Animal Shelter and buy yourself a dog. That's what Actor Jerry Mandy did six months ago. Now he's trained the police pup, Pal, and a major studio wants to star him in a series of pictures. They say he's the best bet since Rin-Tin-Tin.

Shirley Ross saved a fiddler his job on "Cafe Society." The musicians were faking while the sound track was on. One fiddler bore down and the strains of his violin mingled with the track, spoiling the take. Before he could be blamed Shirley called out: "Hey, Heifetz—that was mighty slick sound."

Diana Bourbon, who produced "Hollywood Hotel" for many years, will be sadly missed now that she's leaving for New York to take care of "The Man from Mars" with Orsen Welles. Hope she won't stir up as much censorship as he did.

Charlie Rogers hopes to have Bing Crosby and Irene Dunpe in the "Star Maker" but I'll bet the Gus Edward's story will star Bob Hope and Shirley Ross. They'd be good, too!

Jimmy Stewart is busy cutting the 16 mm. picture he took himself. Mostly of Brooks Hayward, Margaret Sullavan's offspring — their Christmas present.

Nancy Carroll, now that Ernest Truex and the last of the Mdivianis are showing interest, doesn't seem to mind scrapping with Charles Grayson.

If more of our actors were as cooperative and far seeing as Bela Lugosi they wouldn't complain about hard times. Last summer when those two revived horror pictures were being shown locally (and for the price of one), Lugosi made personal appearances with them—for nothing. Was such a success he was sent on tour with them at his usual salary. Result—horror headlines, and now, as you know, he's doing "Son of Frankenstein."

The major studios must have gotten a slant at Republic's budget sheet before each went into production of a super-Western. Did you know the Gene Autrys and the serials pay for all the other pictures produced on the Republic lot?

On Frances Langford's air trip to her home in Florida, the ship ran into a thunder storm. She was scared stiff, so were the other passengers—all ladies. The stewardess, in her endeavor to quiet them, whispered to Frances, "Please sing." All Frances could think of was "I've Got a Feelin' You're Foolin.'" And on the last chorus she sang "I've Got a Feelin' I'm Fallin.'"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 30.

JOAB BANTON, former district attorney of New York, is slated to get the Supreme Court job vacated by Lieut. Gov.-elect Charles Poletti. Banton, who is 69, will serve until the next election, when he will reach the retirement age . . . David Burnstine, who has devoted all these years to making his name famous—as a member of the Four Aces bridge champions—is changing his name . . . Enric Madriguera is hocking his Stradivarius to raise enough money to purchase the defunct La Conga . . . That 111-page confidential probation report which has just come to light—and which exposes conditions in Brooklyn—was written by Agnes Sullivan.

A HOLLYWOOD GROUP, very much excited about conditions in Europe, was discussing the position of Russia, its leaders and what its destiny might be . . . Greta Garbo, who was present, listened attentively and contributed but three words to the conversation: "Who Is Lenin?"

GEORGE WHITE, who has a $200,000 production planned for the New York World's Fair, won't proceed unless Grover Whalen induces the fair's officials to erect the $400,000 building required to house the enterprise . . . Rouben Mamoulian, who will direct the movie version of Odet's "Golden Boy," yesterday hired Lewis Meltzer, author of the recent Ina Claire show, to write the adaptation of this prize-fight story. Meltzer never has seen a prize fight . . . A steamship company this week signed 22 of Ted Peckham's Escort Service lads for a South American cruise, just to accommodate the lady passengers. The boys will have their passage free, bar bills approved and even will get spending money. Their only expense will be laundry.

DR. RAY AGAKI, who allegedly represented the Southern Manchurian Railway here, actually was in charge of the dissemination of pro-Japanese propaganda—until his recall, some weeks ago . . . Before he sailed, Agaki summoned one of his local publicists and made one request: "There's but one thing I'd like to take back home with me," he confided. After three days his request was granted and Agaki sailed content—with a baseball autographed by Jack Dempsey and the New York Yankees.

ALTHOUGH JACQUES DEVAL'S name appears on the program as director of "Lorelei," which opens tonight, Deval—who wrote the play—hasn't attended rehearsals for two weeks. Sir Cedric Hardwicke, coproducer, has been commuting from Philadelphia to stage the production. Deval sailed secretly for France on Saturday . . . Marlene Dietrich may appear in the movie version of "Lorelei," an anti-Nazi play. She's been attending rehearsals with Dave Selznick . . . Kaufman & Hart have finished the second act of "The American Way" and have all the financial backing required . . . Balanchine's risque "Red Light Ballet" of "The Boys From Syracuse"—the town's newest favorite—has been eliminated.

BEFORE ROBERT IRWIN left the court room where he was sentenced to serve 139 years for the Easter Sunday triple murder, the mad artist presented a sketch he had made to his famed attorney, Samuel S. Leibowitz . . . The sketch, which is an excellent likeness, shows Leibowitz yanking a frightened boy from the electric chair. The inscription Irwin wrote was: "When the Roll Is Called Up Yonder for the Chair—I'll Not Be There."

THAT RUSSIAN nobility dance at the Plaza, which will be attended by the Grand Duchess Marie and the Obolenskys, is really for the purpose of introducing a new perfume . . . Earl Carroll has signed the only name he'll feature at his new Inner Circle Club in Hollywood—Ray Noble . . . Special Prosecutor Amen has pounced upon the list of campaign contributors in Brooklyn . . . Playwright Samson Raphaelson, who returned to New York, declared: "Every place is very much like any other place—especially California."

Post Columnist Is Set for Film Role

Lucius Beebe, the man who coined the term cafe society and from whom Paramount bought the title for their picture, "Cafe Society," today was set for a role in that production.

Beebe will be invited to write his own lines in order to afford him an opportunity to display the caustic humor that has made him one of New York's famous wits.

He is also acting as technical adviser on Cecil B. De Mille's "Union Pacific." Beebe is an authority on the American railroads and their history, having recently completed a successful book, "High Iron," about railroading.

Meant No Fence

Rosemary Lane made her initial jump on horseback unintentionally when her horse hurdled over a fence while the star was on location for "Oklahoma Kid."

Reflecting Shutters

Ann Sheridan has mirrored venetian blinds in her boudoir.

Stunt Men Avert Mishap to 'Moto'

Hollywood stunt men who have appeared with Peter Lorre in most of the action-packed "Mr. Moto" pictures were responsible for the actor's miraculous escape from death or injury in a serious week-end automobile accident.

Struck by another car near their Beverly Hills home, the Lorre car turned over twice. Peter's wife, thrown from the auto at the moment of impact, sustained a fractured wrist, but Lorre was imprisoned in the back seat, unable to get out. Yet after the accident, he emerged from the wreckage without a scratch!

"I owe my good fortune to Harvey Parry, Duke Green and other Hollywood stunt men," was Lorre's explanation of his amazing escape from injury. "When they made me an honorary member of their group, I memorized their rules for safety. One rule was: 'In case of an auto crash, lie down immediately on the floor of the car.'"

Labor Stage Revue Comes Here Monday

Is Broadway Hit 'Drums' at Capitol Other New Bills

Next Monday night at the National Theater, the original New York cast will present the musical revue "Pins and Needles," sponsored by Labor Stage and performed by members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union. It has been one of the most successful revues of the past year. "Ribbing" itself and everyone else in its songs, dances and skits, and acted by a youthful and expertly directed cast, this satire rests on vigor and wit in sketches and liveliness of tune and rhymes. "Mussolini Handicap," "Sunday in the Park," "Economics," "The Little Red Schoolhouse," "A Lesson in Etiquette," and "Four Little Angels of Peace" are some of the 18 sketches. The music and lyrics are by Harold J. Rome and the staging by Charles Friedman. The usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given.

"Drums," Alexander Korda's long-awaited Technicolor production, starring Sabu and featuring Raymond Massey, Roger Livesey and Valerie Hobson, will be the major screen attraction at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning tomorrow. An A. E. W. Mason story of the frontiers of India, it emphasizes scenic brilliance and thrilling intrigue with Sabu, of "Elephant Boy" fame, as the loyal young Prince Azim and Mr. Massey as the sinister Prince Ghul. Headlining the stage program will be Jay C. Flippen, theater and radio m. c., who will present as other acts, Deane Janis, Hollywood singing starlet; Vox and Walters, the ventriloquist team; Paul Gordon and the 16 Rhythm Rockets.

Dick Powell and Olivia de Havilland come to the Earle Theater tomorrow in "Hard to Get," a new Warner Brothers' romantic drama. Not a musical, it does however, introduce two new songs—"You Must Have Been a Beautiful Baby" and "There's a Sunny Side to Every Situation," both sung by Powell. Charles Winninger, Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans, Allen Jenkins and Bonita Granville have supporting roles in this story of a spoiled heiress and a determined young man. The stage bill will feature in person, Dick Foran, young singing screen player, seen recently in "The Sisters" and "Four Daughters." Other entertainers will include Arren and Broderick, the Shanghai Wing troupe, the 16 Earle Roxyettes and the "Secret Ambitions" entertainers, selected from talented Washingtonians with a desire to make a stage debut.

The quiet heroism of a country doctor who goes about his work without glory, and frequently without pay, is dramatically depicted in "A Man To Remember," opening today at RKO-Keith's Theater. Edward Ellis is seen as a rural practitioner who devotes his life to the community under his care. Anne Shirley, his ward, and Lee Bowman, his son, provide the romantic interest. William Henry, John Wray, Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas have important supporting roles in this adaptation from the Katharine Havilland-Taylor story, "Failure." Walt Disney's "Ferdinand the Bull" is being held over for a second week, as an added attraction.

"The Great Waltz," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new musical romance based on the music of Johann Strauss 2d, remains for a second week at Lowe's Palace Theater. An imposing line-up of players and a lavish production make this one of the important musicals of the year. Heading the cast is Luise Rainer, Fernand Gravet and a newcomer, Militza Korjus. In featured roles are Hugh Herbert, Lionel Atwill, Herman Bing, Henry Hull, Minna Gombell and Christian Rub. Julien Duvivier, French director of "Pepe le Moko" and "Carnet de Bal," makes his American directorial bow with "The Great Waltz."

Today Paramount's cavalcade of aviation history, "Men With Wings," will open at the Metropolitan Theater for a repeat, downtown engagement. This Technicolor production recently enjoyed a successful week at the Earle Theater. Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell head the cast of the film, which was directed by William Wellman. Aviation history—from the Wright Brothers to Howard Hughes—provides the background for this story of a pioneer flying trio.

With a cast including Joan Crawford, Margaret Sullavan, Robert Young, Melvyn Douglas and Fay Bainter, "The Shining Hour" opens at the Columbia Theater today for a second F street engagement. The story, directed by Frank Borzage, revolves around a famous dancer who, tiring of the spotlight, marries a wealthy farmer. Complications set in when her husband's sister resents the presence of the dancer in the family home. "The Shining Hour" marks the first time that Joan Crawford and Margaret Sullavan have played in the same picture.

The International Cinema Festival will continue at the Little Theater. Today is the last day for the double bill of "A Nous La Liberte" and "Man of Aran." Tomorrow and Saturday "Scarface" will be shown. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, "The Eternal Mask" and "The Adventures of Chico" will share the screen. "Wings of the Morning" will be shown Wednesday and Thursday of next week which will be completed with "M" and "Life Begins at Forty," on Friday and Saturday.

"Gentlemen in Top Hats and Gentlemen in Crowns" is the title of one of the outstanding shorts at the Trans-Lux Theater, starting tomorrow. Going back to 1897, it sketches the rise and fall of world leaders and rulers. "Racing Pigeons" and "Midnight Frolics" are other shorts sharing the program with newsreel coverage of world events.

Charles Boyer introduces a new leading woman in the person of Michele Morgan at the Belasco Theater where "Orage" ("The Storm") begins its second week today. Adapted from the Henri Bernstein novel, it is a character study in a triangle story. Selected short subjects augment the feature.

Beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, the attraction for next week at the Gayety Theater will be "Hollywood Scandals," a potpourri of burlesque and vaudeville specialties. The costars of the company will be Al Golden, comedian, and Diana Logan, whose revolutionary artistry has made her a "knockout" all along the trail. Others in the cast will include Max Coleman, Benita Francis, Sam Gould, Frank Penny, "Boots" Burns, Saul Fields and Allene Dale, supported by a flock of bright young chorus girls.

Little

The barran isles of Aran and the mechanical complexities of industrial life are the widely divergent themes on the second bill of the International Cinema Festival, which began a two-day showing at the Little Theater yesterday morning.

"Man of Aran," directed and photographed by Robert Flaherty first appeared in 1934 and time has shown it to be as unchanging as the sea which sweeps over Aran's rocky crevices off the western coast of Ireland. The simple story of a small family's life at the continual mercy of the sea is presented with miraculous detail and vivid photography. The ever present clacking of the seagulls and the roaring of the breakers are a unique background to this brief film of far-away life.

On the other hand—to this reviewer at least—the years since 1931 seem not to have been so kind to Rene Clair's masterpiece, "A Nous La Liberte." While it remains an interesting and memorable film, it lacks that unique and original freshness which made it one of the finest pictures of the 1931-32 season. Its leisurely tempo often lapses into a drag. Not only was it this film which introduced Rene Clair to American audiences, but its producers, Films Sonores Tobias, sued Charlie Chaplin for plagiarism in his subsequent production on similar lines, "Modern Times." Because of its revolutionary technique and its brilliantly pointed parallel between prison life and so-called "liberty" in a regimented factory, "A Nous La Liberte" holds its place as a landmark in film history.

Cobb Bequeaths 2 Million to Yale, $250,000 to Nurse

Yale University and the Yale Alumni University Fund will receive nearly $2,000,000 from the estate of E. Benedict Cobb, former Washington lawyer, whose will was filed for probate yesterday in District Court.

To Miss Miriam M. Caldwell, of Morristown, Tenn., nurse and companion of Cobb, his wife and his brother in their final illnesses, he left $250,000 with the remark that the bequest would "but poorly repay" her kindness.

Cobb, who died in Pittsfield, Mass., November 24, at the age of 89, lived at the Mayflower when he was in Washington. He had not practiced law since 1886. H. Prescott Gatley, Washington attorney and personal friend of Cobb, estimated last night that the estate would total nearly $3,000,000. Gatley was left $20,000, and another Washingtonian, Miss Edith J. Goode, niece of Cobb's wife, received $10,000.

Cobb left $200,000 each to the Yale University General Fund "in memory of the class of 1872," of which he was a member, and to the Yale Alumni University Fund Association, and also provided that the residue of his estate should be split between the two. Among other bequests, he left $30,000 to Mrs. Alice G. B. Seligman, of New York City, a relative, "in pleasant recollection of the long, long ago at the Tarrytown homestead."

Seal to Study Tax Penalty Plea Against Hospitals

District Commissioners Hazen and McCoach yesterday turned over to Corporation Counsel Seal, for study, a taxpayer's letter demanding that ten local hospitals be removed from the tax-exempt list because they are "discriminating" against members of Group Health Association.

D. N. Shoemaker, 6800 Eastern avenue, named Garfield, Sibley, Emergency, Columbia, Casualty, Homeopathic, Providence, Episcopal, George Washington and Georgetown hospitals as the offenders in his letter to the Commissioners and Fred D. Allen, tax assessor for the District.

"The foregoing hospitals possess today a virtual monopoly of the hospitalization facilities of the District of Columbia," he said.

The hospitals do not bar members of G. H. A. or any other organization, but withhold courtesy privileges from certain of the staff's physicians and surgeons because they are not members of the District Medical Society.

2 'Bandanna Bandit' Suspects Indicted in 5 D. C. Holdups

Edward C. Fullam, so-called "bandanna bandit," who, police say, took part in five armed holdups last month, was indicted by a District court grand jury yesterday together with an alleged accomplice, John T. Bartholomew.

Fullam, 23 years old, was arrested Thanksgiving Day at the home of his bride in Sewell, N. J. Police said he claimed he engaged in the robberies to obtain money to go on his honeymoon. Bartholomew, 22, of the 800 block of East Capitol street, allegedly waited in an automobile while Fullam held up store proprietors. Loot totaled $630.

James S. Thomas, 20, colored CCC enrollee, was indicted for placing stones on the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks near Bladensburg road on November 17 and 18. John A. Newman, of the 400 block Franklin street northeast, a track walker, said he had seen a youth near the tracks after discovering the rock just before a train was due.

The grand jury indicted for robbery two youths who allegedly knocked down Mrs. K. M. Fender, of Fort Worth, Tex., in front of the Freer Art Gallery a week ago. The men charged are Eugene White, 18, of the 90f block Desmond court southwest, and Joseph Johnson, 18, of the 1100 block Half street southwest.

A city postoffice letter carrier, Norman Henderson, of the first block of Eighteenth street northeast, was indicted on a charge of interfering with the mails by taking $2 from a letter he was to deliver. Postal inspectors said Henderson admitted taking other sums from the mails.

Other indictments were:

Leap to Death At Hospital Caps Suicide Attempt

Stephen Sullivan, 47, of Phoenix, Ariz., in Sibley Hospital with self-inflicted knife wounds, plunged from a second-story window of the hospital yesterday. He was dead when hospital attendants found his body in a cement courtyard 30 feet below the sun porch from which he jumped.

Sullivan was taken to the hospital Tuesday night by his brother, John L. Sullivan, 3304 Ninth street northeast, after he was found unconscious in bed at his brother's home. His throat, arms and chest had been slashed, according to doctors.

Old-Age Bonus For Marriage Is Considered

Changes in Act Weighed Overhaul Now Is Urged Pay-as-You-Go Opposed

The Administration may recommend to Congress a change in the social security act which will provide for an increase in old-age benefits to married men and a cut in benefits to bachelors, it was learned yesterday.

This proposal is one of those under consideration in the preparation of amendments which the Administration will ask Congress to adopt.

It is in line with a suggestion advanced by President Roosevelt last spring when he informed Chairman Arthur J. Altmyer of the Social Security Board that the act should be changed to provide for benefits to "aged wives." He also recommended that provision be made for survivor benefits to widows and young children of persons dying before reaching retirement age.

Quick Changes Favored

The belief prevails in some quarters that the act will rest on a more secure foundation if such discriminatory features as the benefit increase to married men are not injected into it.

Considerable sentiment exists for a thorough overhauling of the old-age benefit plan in order to place it on as constructive a basis as possible. Some officials feel that, if overhauling is delayed for a few years, the stake which millions of voters will have in the old-age system will make it politically impracticable to revise the plan in any appreciable degree.

The Administration is expected to ask Congress to take no action with regard to the pay roll tax to finance old-age benefits. If no action is taken to keep the tax at the present level of 1 per cent for both employer and employe, it will rise automatically to 1½ per cent for each on January 1, 1940.

Bigger Reserve in View

Advocates of the "pay-as-you-go" principle of old age compensation will try to keep the pay roll taxes at the present level, thus nipping in the bud the large reserve fund to help finance future old age benefits provided for in the social security act at present.

If several million workers now excluded are brought into the system under additional changes in the act advocated by the President, the reserve ultimately might be more than $60,000,000,000, instead of the $47,000,000,000 final total frequently mentioned heretofore. Revised calculations showed that the reserve, even without extending the act to cover workers new excluded, would be much more than this total.

Extravagance Feared

Two main questions have been raised by the plan to build up a huge reserve:

Will the accumulation of large pay-roll tax collections encourage Government extravagance and thus result, in effect, in dissipation of the revenues which the law provided should be segregated to help meet future old-age benefit payments?

Will the collection from pay rolls of enormous revenues to be used to buy up Government securities in the hands of the public—if deficit financing is ever cut down sufficiently to permit this—operate as a brake on business by "freezing" money that otherwise would be spent for goods and services?

St. Andrew Men Told Civilization Depends on Church

Preservation of civilization depends upon mobilization of Christianity, a responsibility which cannot be assumed entirely by the clergy, James L. Houghteling, commissioner of immigration and national president of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, last night told a brotherhood gathering in St. Thomas' Church.

The Rev. F. Bland Tucker, D. D., chaplain of the Potomac Assembly, gave the address at the service of admission for new members of the brotherhood and for the rededication of regular members.

H. Lawrence Choate, president of the Potomac Assembly and national treasurer of the brotherhood, presided at dinner.

The Rev. H. S. Wilkinson, D. D., rector of St. Thomas' Church, delivered the address of welcome. After reports from chapters of the Potomac Assembly had been given by local directors, the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, delivered the closing address and benediction.

Horton Addresses Advertising Men

The advertising man of the future will have to be part scientist and part doctor to avoid misleading statements, James A. Horton, chief examiner of the Federal Trade Commission, yesterday told the Advertising Club of Washington at the Raleigh Hotel. Amendments to food and drug laws and other acts give the commission stronger powers governing the honesty of advertising, he said.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Rites Tomorrow For Father Ripple, Holy Name Chief

Funeral services will be held at Saint Dominic's Catholic Church here tomorrow at 10 a. m. for the Rev. Michael J. Ripple, 63, cofounder of the Nation-wide Holy Name Society, largest Catholic group in the country. His brother, the Rev. Leonard J. Ripple of Brooklyn, Md., will sing the requiem mass, to be followed by burial in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Father Ripple died Tuesday at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, after a long illness.

A native of Baltimore, Father Ripple entered the Dominican Order at St. Rose's, Ky., in 1894. He studied at St. Joseph's Priory, Somerset, Ohio, and was ordained by the late Archbishop Moeller, of Cincinnati, in 1901.

In 1908 Father Ripple helped organize the Holy Name Society and remained its director for 12 years. He was also a prime mover in planning and building the Dominican Priory at Jersey City. He lectured and engaged in mission work throughout the country.

Father Ripple is survived by a second brother, Frank J. Ripple, of Baltimore, and three sisters, Mrs. Theodore Heckwolfe, of Baltimore; Sister Marie Leonard, O. P., a member of the Dominican Sisterhood, Bloomington, Ill., and Mrs. Anna C. Donnelly, of Washington.

Court Upholds D.C. Licensing of Guides

A special statutory court sitting in the Court of Appeals Building yesterday denied the application of Stanley L. Mahoney, of 824 Twentieth street northwest, for an injunction that would have restrained the District from arresting him for acting as a guide without a license.

Mahoney, represented by Christopher Cannon, held that the District regulations for the licensing of guides were discriminatory and unconstitutional.

The court was composed of Associate Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the United States Court of Appeals, and Justices Jennings Bailey and Joseph W. Cox, of the District Court.

Agnes C. Robinson, Of Capital, Buried In Richmond

Burial services for Miss Agnes Conway Robinson, of 2001 O street northwest, were held at Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, yesterday afternoon. Miss Robinson, daughter of a prominent family of Virginia lawyers, died at her home Monday at 81.

After the death of her father, Conway Robinson, in 1894, Miss Robinson devoted herself to charitable works and to the perpetuation of her father's memory. For this latter purpose she endowed the Conway Robinson Memorial Park Association through the purchase of a large tract at Manassas, Va., which was subsequently donated to the State. The tract is now being developed as the Conway Robinson State forest.

Miss Robinson's mother was a daughter of Benjamin Watkins Leigh, who revised the State code of law. Miss Robinson was the last surviving member of her immediate family.

20 Days Left For Auto Tests In Maryland

Every Car Must Pass License Depends on It Tag Obstructions Hit

Maryland's "Save a Life" automobile inspection campaign has only 20 more days to run, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Walter R. Rudy warned yesterday.

As a prerequisite to the registration of motor vehicles for 1939, inspection of all cars in the State must be made by December 20 or car owners will be refused new license plates, Commissioner Rudy said.

Approximately 1,500 inspection stations have been named where motorists may receive free examination of their cars. General repair garages, service stations and auto distributors in communities throughout the State are acting as test stations, the commissioner said.

Motorists were warned especially to see that bumper guards don't obstruct license plates. The tests must include also brakes, lights, horns, steering mechanism, windshield wipers, mirrors, license tags and windshields.

"A great number of motor vehicle owners," said Commissioner Rudy, "are overlooking the fact that the law says nothing must obstruct any part of the tags to prevent their identity. These bumper guards cover numbers and make it difficult at times to distinguish them."

Any automobile or truck found unsafe or with a mechanical defect must be placed in safe condition before an official inspection sticker will be issued, Commissioner Rudy added.

Lottie Anderson, Retiring, Honored By Associates

Miss Lottie L. Anderson, of the Mail and Correspondence Division, Eastern Regional Office, Forest Service, was retired yesterday after 31 years' service in the Federal Government. Her fellow workers tendered an informal tea upon her leave-taking.

Defense Plans Held Business Stimulant

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—The magazine Banking, official publication of the American Bankers Association, describes today the United States Government's preparations for national defense as "a business stimulant of first importance in the immediate future."

In its December survey of business, William R. Kuhns, editor, wrote: "Directly, through prospective spending of a billion dollars in 18 months and indirectly, through the mobilization of industry, national defense has occupied a wholly unaccustomed place in the middle of the business picture.

"This is true in other countries as well as in the United States, and the strain on national budgets, here and abroad, will speed up the inflationary processes long at work."

Utility Firms File Plans for Integration

December 1 Deadline
Am. Gas & Electric
Details Are Lacking

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 30.—All major utility holding companies tonight had met the December 1 deadline set by Chairman William O. Douglas of the Securities and Exchange Commission for filing voluntary integration plans under the holding company act of 1935.

Three more big systems were reported to have filed today, leaving only some smaller ones, and a secondary plan by a subsidiary (American Power & Light Co.) of a larger one to come in tomorrow.

Today's additions were the following: The $488,000,000 American Gas & Electric Co. (made public in Washington), the $1,194,000,000 Commonwealth & Southern Corporation and the $1,037,000,000 Associated Gas & Electric Co.

Both the last two corporations have figured prominently in disputes with Administration agencies. Howard C. Hopson, a former officer of Associated, has frequently been involved in controversies, and Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth & Southern, has carried on long and bitter conflict with the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Commonwealth & Southern described its report to the SEC as "confidential" and would give no information, but reliable Wall Street sources reported that Willkie termed any plan for integration of Southern properties of Commonwealth unfeasible until an agreement with TVA was reached. However, Willkie was said to have repeated his recent public offer to sell any or all Southern Commonwealth properties to the TVA at appraisals determined by the SEC.

The act requires not more than one intermediary stage of holding companies between the top holding company and operating companies, and either physical interconnection or approximate geographical contiguity of operating companies. A holding company is defined as one owning 10 per cent or more of voting stock in a subsidiary company.

Seaboard Railway Net $191,159 in October

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 30.—The net operating income for October of 1938 of the Seaboard Railway amounted to $191,159, an increase of $103,941 over October of 1937, and with one exception was higher than the net railway operating income for any October since 1930, L. R. Powell, jr., chief executive officer, said today.

Total operating revenues for the month of October, 1938, amounted to $3,378,802, an increase of .57 per cent over October, 1937. Freight revenue amounted to $2,760,018, an increase of $89,723 over the same month last year, and was higher than freight revenues for October of any year since 1930. Passenger revenue was $248,806 as compared with $325,502 for October, 1937, a decrease of $76,696 or 23.56 per cent.

Stocks Rally in Final Hour
Failure of French Strike Influential
Government Issues Again Advance

New York, Nov. 30.—A strong rally in the final hour, when it became apparent that Premier Daladier had broken the scheduled general strike in France, gave the stock market one of its best advances of recent sessions. The composite average of the market showed a gain of 0.79 point and advances of the individual leaders from 1 to more than 3 points. All groups of stocks participated, but business was slow on the big board, the early hours having been extremely dull. Less than a million shares changed hands.

Aviation issues came back into the limelight and there was a spurt in the sugar issues, which have been dull for months, on word that a reduction may be made in the tariff on Cuban sugar imports into this country. According to Col. Batista, an oral agreement has already been reached for such a reduction. This was reflected in a large turnover today in the usually quiet sugar issues. The Cuban American shares were a feature, the preferred jumping 7½ points. American sugar common was lower but the preferred was higher.

Aviation Shares Recover

Aviations recovered moderately from their recent sinking spell but followers of these stocks are still anxiously awaiting final word from the Government on the letting of actual contracts. United Aircraft was the most active, closing more than a point higher. Boeing add 1⅝. Glenn Martin about a point and inactive Wright Aero jumped 4. Sperry and Curtiss Wright also were popular.

The market still appears to be in a test period and while the gain today was substantial, there is still plenty of bearish sentiment in the street. First reports that the French Government had the general strike situation under control brought virtually no reflection in the local market but as the reports became more convincing throughout the day the domestic market picked up courage.

French Outlook Improves

A major part of the returning confidence of our markets must be attributed clearly to this better French outlook, which resulted from Premier Edouard Daladier's success in turning the French economy toward economic soundness. European exchanges turned vigorously upward, as French capitalists began to draw their London and New York balances back to Paris. Sterling recovered another 2 11-16 cents in this market, while the French franc 1¾ points. Other European units likewise improved.

News Is Optimistic

Domestic trade news continued on the upside despite the widespread convictions that a leveling off is due at this time. Midweek trade news today include the report of electric power output, which showed another substantial improvement, the betterment over the previous week amounting to 5.7 per cent, compared with the same week last year the improvement was 2.1 per cent.

Oils stepped out in today's trading and the day's most active stock was Richfield, which added a half point. Standard of California also was prominent on the upside.

Large deliveries of corn on December contracts unsettled the grain markets. Selling was encouraged by uncertainty as to the Government's methods of disposing of default loan corn now on hand. This staple closed down ⅜ to ¾ cents a bushel while wheat was unchanged to off ⅜ cent. Cotton moved within a narrow range and closed up 2 to 4 points.

Treasury to Borrow

United States Treasury bonds displayed slight recuperative powers in the listed bond market today, despite the announcement that $700,000,000 of fresh obligations will appear on the market next Monday. Other sections of the listed market also were better, with speculative bonds again in demand owing to the advances of equities.

German issues led the foreign section upward as the permission for dollar payment on a corporate issue seems to promise the long hoped-for betterment of the position. Trading in all bonds was $7,500,000.

Government Issues Up

Advances in Treasury issues were far from emphatic, but they broke the long spell of slowly sinking quotations. Gains ranged from 1-32 to 8-32 point, and the guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations also improved. Rapid distribution of the $40,000,000 New York City issue disclosed again the extent of institutional demand for high grade bonds, and obviously provided some stimulus for treasuries. Best rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were well maintained.

Speculative railroad bonds had a good tone, with some issues up 1 to 3 points, although most gains were fractional. Medium-priced interest-payers and the default bonds alike reflected inquiry. Local transaction securities staged another forward movement. Holding company obligations were uncertain, but industrial convertibles moved ahead. Communications bonds failed to attract buyers.

German Bonds Active

German government 7s and 5½s were active and fractionally higher on the continued payment of modified interest in dollars, while most Reich corporate loans showed larger gains. Siemens & Halske 6½s reacted from the high level reached in expectation of the plan for interest in dollars, which now is realized. Latin-American default bonds improved slightly. Japanese issues were good, but Italians remained idle. Best grade foreigns were dull and steady.

Steel Activity Declines to 60.5 Per Cent

Drops 1 Point in Week
Rail Buying Increases
Auto Output Rises

New York, Nov. 30.—Steel operations are lower in some districts, resulting in a one point decline to 60.5 per cent for the industry as a whole, mainly because of a lessening of the pressure for deliveries to the automobile manufacturers, but partly due to lighter orders from users in general as year-end inventory time approaches, says Iron Age in its weekly summary of the steel industry.

"Although prospects are accumulating that point to a further upward trend in steel buying, not much change may develop until after the first of the year unless there should be a price advance for the first quarter, an unlikely possibility. Price announcements, which are expected this week or next, probably will reaffirm present quotations on steel and pig iron.

"An unprecedented price situation is a retroactive reduction on tin plate covering the period from January 1 to November 10, 1938, whereby adjustments are being made to $5.10 per base box, the difference between that figure and the official price of $5.35 that was in effect being refunded to tin plate users. It is estimated that refunds will total close to $5,000,000.

"Among the new prospects the most unexpected are sizable inquiries and orders from some of the railroads for equipment and track materials. The Norfolk & Western has come into the market for 2,100 freight cars, the Illinois Central has ordered 1,000 and is considering an additional 1,000, and the Bessemer & Lake Erie has ordered 200. The first orders of the annual rail buying movement are 17,280 tons from the Louisville & Nashville and 2,600 tons from the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, both placed with the Alabama mill, which resumed operations November 28 for what may be an extended run as other orders are in prospect.

"Though fabricated structural steel lettings at the moment are rather light, amounting to only a little over 15,000 tons in the week, inquiries are expanding, totaling about 49,000 tons, which includes 16,500 tons for the Criminal Courts building, New York, and 15,000 tons for a bridge across Narragansett Bay, Rhode Island.

"The automobile industry is expected to make further large purchases before the end of December as its plans for continued high production extend at least through January. This week's assemblies may reach 100,000 cars, which would be the high mark for the year thus far. Ford Motor Co. is stepping up production to 4,000 cars a day as rapidly as possible and has increased steel output."

Canadian Bond Issues Gain in November

New York, Nov. 30.—Total offerings of new Canadian bond issues in November amounted to $83,593,790 exclusive of Dominion treasury bills, according to the Dominion Securities Corporation. This compares with $33,204,100 in October and $134,606,217 in November, 1937.

There was included in the November total a new issue of $40,000,000 Dominion of Canada 3 per cent bonds due November 15, 1968, sold in the United States and payable in United States currency.

Lead and Zinc Prices Reduced

New York, Nov. 30. — Unsettled conditions prevailing in nonferrous metal markets recently was accentuated further today when new prices were posted for lead and zinc, lowering the former by .10 of a cent a pound and the latter by ¼ of a cent.

The new quotation on lead is 5 cents a pound, New York basis, and was first quoted by the American Smelting & Refining Co., a leader in the field. The new price of zinc is 4½ cents a pound. On November 21 a similar reduction was made in zinc.

German Firms Offer To Resume Payments

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Two German firms which defaulted on $17,500,000 of debentures sold in this country, offered today, with permission of the German government, to resume payments at half the agreed rate of interest.

Siemens & Halske A. G. and Simiens-Schuckertwerke A. G. offered par payments of defaulted past interest, and a capital payment of 2 per cent, contingent upon acceptance of a reduction of interest from 6½ to 3¼ per cent per annum, payable semi-annually at the office of Dillon Read & Co., here. In the event of default upon the new offer, the old defaulted rate would be restored, the companies said.

E. DuPont Sues Pathe Film Co.

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—E. I. Dupont de Nemours & Co., Inc., began suit today in United States District Court to restrain the Pathe Film Corporation from transferring 3,500 common voting shares in the Dupont Film Manufacturing Co. without first offering them to the plaintiff on equal terms.

The plaintiff holds 6,500 voting shares in the film manufacturing company, owning the whole stock with the defendant. The complaint indicates that back of the suit lies a fear that a large block of the stock might fall into the hands of 7,000 Pathe Film Corporation stockholders, and, through them, reach the general public.

The plaintiff, through William H. Button, its attorney, asks that the defendant be permanently enjoined from selling its shares without offering them to E. I. Dupont de Nemours, Inc., or as alternatives, marketing them for cash, or stamping them with a notice that if transferred to Pathe stockholders and the stockholders decide to sell, they shall offer the stock "on equal terms" to the plaintiff.

Electricity Output 5.7% Above Year Ago

New York, Nov. 30 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States for the week ended November 26 totaled 2,183,807,000 kilowatt hours, a drop of 3.8 per cent from 2,270,296,000 in the preceding week but 5.7 per cent above 2,065,378,000 in the comparable 1937 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The break in the recent week-to-week rise to new production peaks was attributed to the Thanksgiving holiday. Since output fell a little more than seasonally expected, however, the Associated Press index of production, based on the 1929-30 average as 100, declined to 116.4 from 116.7 the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 115.

Treasury Borrows At 0.021 Per Cent

The Secretary of the Treasury announces that the tenders for $100,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated November 30, 1938, and to mature March 1, 1939, which were offered on November 25, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

The total applied for was $325,620,000 and the total accepted $100,304,000. The average price was 99.995, equivalent to a rate of 0.021 per cent.

Crisis in South Seen in Cotton Crop Control

South at Cross-roads
Record Supply Cited
Problem for Nation

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Nov. 30. — The board of directors of the New Orleans Cotton Exchange said in its annual report today the South faced a "readjustment of the first magnitude which vitally affects" the entire Nation, if the present plan of crop control continues.

After pointing to the unprecedented crop production of 1937 and the resultant record carryover, the board said the Department of Agriculture estimates for the 1938-39 crop was in excess of 12,000,000 bales.

"Your board of directors feels," the report said, "that if the present plan of crop control, in all its ramifications, is to continue, the South is facing, if not the greatest economic crisis since the Civil War, certainly a readjustment of the most serious magnitude which vitally affects, not only the cotton industry and its people, but the entire Nation.

"We are at the cross-roads. Are we going to give up our foreign markets and plan only for domestic use? Or, are we to regain our world markets and again take our place as the greatest cotton producing country?"

The report said "in no sense" was criticism of Secretary Wallace and his associates intended. "It must be realized," the report said, "that his hands are at times politically tied, which frustrates his plans and in the end nullifies his efforts."

How to Torture Your Husband

WHY DON'T YOU GO OUT FOR A WALK INSTEAD OF JUST LYING AROUND ALL DAY LONG? YOU OUGHT TO GO OUT AND FILL YOUR LUNGS WITH FRESH AIR, AND GET SOME EXERCISE. NO WONDER YOU FEEL SLUGGISH

Bob Burns Says—

The best way to look ahead is to look back and see what's happened before. The reason scientists know where a star is going to be a year from today is because they have traced the record of that star back for hundreds of years.

I see now where a scientist has traced the habits of people back for generations and generations, and has finally figgered what is going to happen to the next generation. He says, "They'll grow up, get a job, fall in love, get married, have children and start worryin' about what's going to happen to the next generation."
